81,000 Longshoremen On Strike

Picket Lines Set Up At Major Ports

Court Injunction Expires Without New Agreement

NEW YORK (AP)—Longshoremen, rejecting a plea from President Kennedy, struck the Atlantic and Gulf coast waterfronts Sunday at the moment a Taft-Hartley Act court injunction expired.

The labor dispute, ranging from Searsport, Maine, to Brownsville, Tex., had halted shipping for four days in October, until the federal government obtained a court order for an 80-day cooling off period.

As the court order expired at 5 p.m. Sunday, Capt. William V. Bradley, president of the International Longshoremen Association, said 81,000 dockworkers were leaving the piers.

Emergency Supplies

Bradley said, however, that the union would handle emergency supplies, as well as military and dangerous cargoes.

Pickets took stations at piers in Manhattan, signalling the beginning of a strike which President Kennedy had said "would choke the economy and cut the nation's lifeline with the rest of the world."

Mayor Robert F. Wagner also had made a last-minute effort to head off the walkout, conferring with union representatives minutes before the strike.

3500 In Baltimore

At the instant the federal court injunction expired, 3,500 longshoremen in Baltimore walked off their jobs.

Kennedy appealed to the union and the New York Shipping Association early Sunday to keep the men working because "the national welfare demands" every effort to avoid a strike.

The association, representing management, indicated willingness to comply, but the longshoremen rejected the President's appeal, saying "any additional extensions would only prolong the situation and in our opinion would be fruitless."

Chokes Economy

Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz sought at the last minute to implement Kennedy's request, and, failing, made arrangements for movement of vital cargo.

"This is an extremely serious development which is detrimental to the national economy, the national health and welfare," Wirtz said, "and it chokes the lifeline to the world economy."

In a telegram to the President, Thomas W. Gleason, chief negotiator for the AFL-CIO union, said the longshoremen "must decline your proposal."

The telegram concluded: "We therefore respectfully request that you reconsider your recommendations. We stand ready to meet with the employers and the federal agencies to negotiate the complex problems of automation, job security and the guaranteeing an employee a day's pay when he is hired for employment."

"We assure you, Mr. President, that the ILA shall work all military cargoes."

Chief Issues

The chief stumbling block is the employers' demand for a cut in the size of work crews.

Gleason also said, "I would like to ask the President to reconsider his proposals. We think we can bargain far better on our own than with those who don't know anything about our industry."

The ILA Saturday offered to submit the size of work crews to an impartial study committee and allow a two-year contract to be negotiated on other issues.

On the work issue, the association wants to cut the size of work gangs from 20 to 17 men.

The union contends the industry already is automated too much and it is not willing to "negotiate our men out of business."

The companies have offered a 27-cent hourly pay raise over a three-year period. Wages now average $3.02 an hour.

Meredith's Parents Targets Of Gunmen

KOSCIUSKO, Miss. (AP)—Three shotgun blasts were fired early Sunday into the frame house here in which Negro James H. Meredith's parents and sister live. No one was hurt.

"All we know about it is that a car pulled up, three shots were fired and the car drove off," said Police Chief J. H. Harvey. He said the shots were fired from a 12-gauge shotgun.

"We are continuing an investigation," he said.

Willie Meredith, 18, sister of the first known Negro to attend the University of Mississippi, said the shots were fired about 12:25 a.m. She said two shots came through a window, one of which lodged in woodwork.

The third hit a pickup truck outside.

In addition to Miss Meredith, who said she had just come home from a party, Meredith's parents, Moses and Roxie Meredith, were in the house, located in this central Mississippi town.

Meredith, however, was out of town. A source in New Orleans said Friday he thought Meredith had gone to New York. Classes at the university were suspended last Tuesday for the Christmas recess.

The shooting was the second such incident here in the past three months. Miss Meredith said several shots were fired outside the house the night of Oct. 1, just a few hours after Meredith enrolled at the university under federal armed guard.

"I was standing behind a refrigerator in the kitchen and didn't see who shot," said Miss Meredith.

Former Panama President Dies

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Former Panama President Harmodio Arias died early Sunday, aboard an airliner en route from Boston to Panama by way of Miami.

Dr. Arias, father-in-law of Dame Margot Fonteyn, famed British ballerina, had left Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston on Saturday. Arias, 76, was treated for heart trouble.

He was on a Northeast Airlines flight at the time of his death. The former president was returning home, said the Panama Embassy in Washington, because Boston physicians had informed the family there was no hope of improvement in his condition.

Aboard the craft with Arias were his son, Gilberto, finance minister of Panama, and a daughter, Mrs. Rosario Arias de Galindo. Another son, Roberto, and Roberto's wife, Dame Margot, accompanied Arias to Boston recently.

Arias was president of Panama from 1932 to 1936. He was publisher of the Pan American, a newspaper published in Panama's capital. He also had interests in two other newspapers there, La Hora and Critica and was a prominent lawyer.

His body left Miami at noon Sunday. Funeral services were set for 10 a.m. Monday in the Cathedral of Panama.

Meredith of the latest incident. But she reported a neighbor saw "a bunch of boys in a car" shoot at the house. Police Chief Harvey said, however, that police had not received this report.

Miss Meredith said she reported the incident to police, who sent several men out to investigate.

Just one week ago, Meredith was arrested here on a charge he failed to yield the right of way at an intersection. He failed to appear in City Court on Wednesday and forfeited $10 bond.

After his arrest, Meredith accused Kosciusko police of mistreating him.

Kosciusko is about 100 miles south of the University of Mississippi at Oxford.

N.Y. News Blackout Continues

NEW YORK (UPI)—News-hungry New Yorkers went without their Sunday papers for the third straight week as negotiations in the city's longest newspaper strike broke down for the second time.

Federal mediators called off talks in the 16-day-old strike until next Wednesday, day after Christmas. That will be the day the strike matches in length the citywide walkout in December 1958.

Even should the strike be settled Wednesday, it would take a day or two more to get the 20,000 idled employees at the nine newspapers back on the job and the presses rolling.

Maryland Records First Holiday Traffic Death

BALTIMORE (AP)—Maryland recorded its first traffic death of the Christmas holiday season Sunday when a 52-year-old Baltimore man died after being struck by a car.

The victim was identified as William J. Revels. He was pronounced dead upon arrival at the Lutheran Hospital.

He was on a Northeast Airlines flight at the time of his death.

The former president was returning home, said the Panama Embassy in Washington, because Boston physicians had informed the family there was no hope of improvement in his condition.

Aboard the craft with Arias were his son, Gilberto, finance minister of Panama, and a daughter, Mrs. Rosario Arias de Galindo. Another son, Roberto, and Roberto's wife, Dame Margot, accompanied Arias to Boston recently.

Traffic fatalities climbed steadily midway through the Christmas holiday weekend, but safety experts expressed cautious optimism about the toll.

In Chicago, Howard Pyle, president of the National Safety Council, said, "If the present trend continues, this will be the safest Christmas holiday on record."

"Based on previous Christmas holidays and the record traffic toll for the past year, the National Safety Council had estimated there would be from 650 to 750 fatalities."

"If the trend holds, the final toll could be as low as 550."

Dusty cars bearing American and European license plates jammed roads here and in Jerusalem, sharply contrasting with the heavy-laden donkeys winding their way through the narrow, twisting streets.

More than 5,000 pilgrims are expected here by Monday. Special airline flights from Beirut and Cairo have been set up to handle the overflow.

Five Children Die In Fire At Prince Frederick

PRINCE FREDERICK, Md. (AP)—Five children burned to death Sunday night when their frame tenant house was destroyed by fire near here.

The fire apparently started from an overheated wood heating stove, said Vernon B. Horsman, Prince Frederick fire chief.

The fire was discovered by a grandmother of the children who was returning from church. She and a baby sitter and another daughter were prevented from entering by flames which quickly enveloped the frame dwelling.

The girl and baby sitter were outside the house when the fire started.

The victims were identified as Linda Vanessa Harper, 2; Shelia Luvenia Thomas, 6; Wayne Augustus Thomas, 7; Earl Gordon Thomas, 9, and Clinton Louellan Harper, 5 months.

African Pilot Arrives With Trade Goods

Fidel Castro, In Happy Mood Welcomes Ship

By JOE MCGOWAN JR.

HAVANA (AP)—Prime Minister Fidel Castro, in an expansive mood, greeted members of the ransom ship African Pilot Sunday and jestingly declared a 24-hour "state of peace" with the United States in observance of the goods-for-prisoners swap.

The 10,000-ton freighter tied up in Havana Harbor at 2:05 p. m. with $11 million worth of food and drugs as down payment for the freedom of 1,113 Cuban Bay of Pigs invasion captives.

About three hours later, the first flights left a military air base near Havana carrying liberated prisoners to the United States.

American and Cuban Red Cross officials met to arrange an inventory of the African Pilot's cargo. Later, Castro visited the mooring place, inspected the ship's papers and chatted with her captain, Alfred Boerum.

The bearded prime minister also took four Americans associated with the ransom delivery on a personal inspection tour of Havana.

E. Barrett Prettyman Jr., a Washington, D.C., attorney who supervised part of the shipping operation, told Castro he wanted to visit the home of the late Ernest Hemingway here.

"Come with me," Castro replied, and took in tow Prettyman, Boerum, former U.S. Surgeon Leonard A. Scheele, and a newsman.

Castro hustled his surprised guests to the Hemingway home, through a modern, multi-million-dollar housing development, past an imposing array of government buildings ("I don't like bureaucracy," he remarked), and down the narrow streets of old Havana.

And 180 miles away, the Castro government was playing cat and mouse with them.

It cloaked in complete silence that long, terrifying delay which saved at the nerve of those waiting helplessly, fearful that the bearded revolutionary who sent them fleeing into exile was negotiating the ransom deal.

Instead, the Cuban government merely was waiting for arrival in Havana Harbor of the freighter African Pilot with the bulk of the ransom material to be delivered immediately. It also was making a calculated checkoff of eight cargo planeloads of perishable supplies.

Waiting Ended

Then, at long last, the hours of tortured waiting ended when the Federal Aviation Agency reported that the first load of freed captives had been borne aloft at 5:07 p.m. EST.

The first plane landed a few minutes after sunset, with a golden glow still in the western sky. An escort of trucks with flashing red lights flanked the plane as it taxied down the runway to the depot where more than 300 newsmen, dignitaries, authorities, nurses and 30 ambulances stood ready to get them started toward a reunion with their frantically waiting families.

The four-engine DC6B, its glittering white fuselage gleaming in the light of a portable spotlight unit brought in to light up the reception area, pulled up to a ramp provided by the Strategic Air Command's 19th Bomb Wing.

A line of 12 buses waited to take on the free prisoners after they walked down the ramp steps and along a 20-yard, roped off area to where the vehicles stood.

Routine Checks Run

Television camera lights played along the side of the plane while there was a few minutes delay before the door was opened. Several immigration officials boarded the plane first to run routine checks and assure the captives of 614 days that they were at last on friendly soil.

Also waiting, during those last few tense moments before the first of the prisoners embarked, were 50 doctors on hand to take care of any immediate needs.

Waiting too, in addition to their families still sweating it out at Dinner Key auditorium some 18 miles away, were Health, Education and Welfare Department officials with checks for $100 for each of the prisoners.

Then they trooped from the plane, waving and smiling as photographers' flashbulbs popped.

Officials Greet First Planeload At Miami, Fla.

Most Of Long Lost Brigade Appear In Good Condition

By OSCAR FRALEY

MIAMI (UPI)—The first planeload of Cuba's Bay of Pigs invasion prisoners, freed from behind the Sugar Cane Curtain with a $70 million ransom, were flown to freedom Sunday after a grim 10½ hour wait shrouded in uncertainty.

A Pan American World Airways DC6 winged out of the south with 107 of the 1,113 ransomed captives who have been imprisoned 20 months and five days in Cuba and landed at Homestead Air Force Base, 20 miles south of Miami, at 6:06 p.m. EST. There were no stretcher cases aboard.

The second plane in this shuttle flight to freedom landed at Homestead at 7 p.m. to the same heart-choking reception which greeted the first. It brought another 107 of the liberated prisoners and Red Cross officials said that they expected it to be followed by two cargo planes loaded with liberated soldiers in an attempt to speed up the long-delayed freedom airlift.

These four flights would account for 400 men, roughly one-third of the long-lost brigade, and officials said they were hopeful of continuing the flights to liberty into the night if Cuban military authorities permitted.

Ended Day Of Torment

For more than 7,000 waiting relatives and friends it ended a day of torment and near-violence as they feared that, once again, Cuban Premier Fidel Castro might be playing a game of blind man's bluff.

Joyously they had started gathering at dawn, anticipating swift delivery on what the Air Force called "Operation X"—for "exchange prisoners." But when the first prisoner passenger plane arrived at San Antonio de Los Baños air base, 25 miles from Havana, at 7:27 a.m. they wept and raged as the hours dragged past without word.

And 180 miles away, the Castro government was playing cat and mouse with them.

It cloaked in complete silence that long, terrifying delay which saved at the nerve of those waiting helplessly, fearful that the bearded revolutionary who sent them fleeing into exile was negotiating the ransom deal.

leg. Another waved with his one arm. But proudly they wore the yellow T-shirts in which Castro dressed them as a symbol of indignity when he sent them home.

And at Dinner Key Auditorium where the families waited impatiently in the cavernous, skeletal building once used as a hangar for clipper seaplanes, there was a screaming roar that rattled the rafters when word came that the first plane finally had brought them home safely.

Back at Homestead, the first plane barely had been cleared when a second DC6 roared over the field and settled into its landing pattern.

A long caravan of cars and motorcycles preceded the first bus as it pulled away with the original arrivals but the erstwhile prisoners, laughing and waving at the windows in the weird glow of lights piercing the darkness, looked clean shaven although underweight.

Dressed Simply

This time, instead of the butter yellow their sick and wounded comrades had been forced to wear, they were attired in simple white or multi-colored sportshirts and trousers.

Pretty hostesses and Cuban exile leaders embraced them as they boarded the buses, the laughing men obviously fighting to hold back their tears of happiness.

They were choked with emotion as father met son, comrade embraced comrade and men in their 50s wrapped their arms around boys in their teens.

"Viva Los Estados Unidos! Viva Kennedy!" one shouted.

"We are not here because of what we did," yelled another. "We are here thanks to the people of the United States."

One of the released prisoners made a "V" for victory in the World War II gesture made famous by Winston Churchill.

"Thank you President Kennedy," he called. "Long live free Cuba."

Federal Judge Orders Mistrial In Hoffa Conspiracy Case

Court Claims Effort Made To Fix Jury

Score Now Stands, Two Acquittals, Two Mistrials

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A mistrial was declared in the James R. Hoffa conspiracy trial Sunday and the judge ordered an investigation of what he termed attempts by the Teamsters president's close associates to influence the jury.

The dramatic end of the nine-week trial came shortly after noon when the U.S. District Court Jury reported—for the fourth time—it was hopelessly deadlocked. The jury deliberated 17 hours.

After the trial, E. P. Horn of Nashville, one of the jurors, said the deadlock was 7-5. He declined to say whether the balance was for acquittal or conviction.

Alfred R. Dalton of Hattiesburg, another juror, said the jury first voted 8-4 for acquittal and one juror later switched his vote, making the final count 7-5 for freeing Hoffa.

Hoffa, 49, had been charged with conspiring to violate the Taft-Hartley Act by taking bribes from a Michigan transport firm in return for labor peace.

Feels Grateful

"My feeling is one of gratitude," said Hoffa solemnly in a courtroom press conference.

This was the fourth time in five years the government failed to get a conviction against the head of the nation's largest single labor union. The score stands at two acquittals and two mistrials.

James F. Neal, chief government prosecutor, said he did not know if a retrial would be sought. "I don't make the decision. You can quote me as saying I don't know," he said.

Hoffa declined to comment on U.S. Dist. Judge William E. Miller's orders for a special grand jury to meet early next month to investigate "the unfortunate events which have marked this trial from its inception."

Miller then told the jury for the first time about the air pistol attack on Hoffa by an ex-mental patient and the two mysterious secret sessions that led to the removal of two jurors in the trial that started Oct. 22.

Attempted Influence

Miller said information was presented at the secret sessions indicating "illegal and improper attempts were being made by close labor union associates of the defendant to contact and influence certain members of the jury."

Although the attempts were not successful, the judge said he had no alternative but to disqualify Mrs. James Paschall and Gratin Fields and replace them with alternates.

The judge directed that transcripts of the two secret sessions be made public to show the evidence as to why the jurors were removed. Miller said he was ordering the U.S. attorney's office to assemble and present to the grand jury all of the evidence concerning the alleged attempts to reach the jurors.

Jury Deadlocked

The judge ordered the mistrial after asking the jurors to indicate by show of hands if they felt there was even a remote possibility of agreement on a verdict. On this, the jurors—locked up since Dec. 5—were unanimous: The deadlock could not be broken by further deliberations.

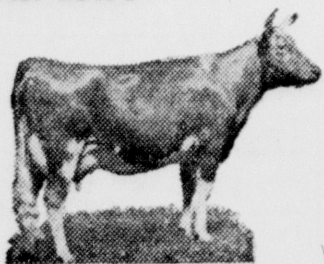

The trial, said Miller, was one of the longest and most difficult over which he had ever presided.

The government sought to show Hoffa got payoffs from Commercial Carriers, Inc., Detroit-based automobile hauler, as a bribe for labor peace.

The prosecution claimed CCI organized Test Fleet Corp., chartered here in 1949, as a truck-leasing business and listed half the stock in the company.

Mrs. Hoffa. The government contended it paid $1 million paid by CCI to Test Fleet from 1944 to 1953.

Official Tabulation Shows 53.7 Million Americans Voted In Last Election

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 53.7 million Americans voted in last month's election, a record off-year turnout that saw Republicans chalk up substantial gains over their showing in 1958.

Nowhere was the Republican advance more dramatic than in the 11 states of the old South where they trebled their vote of four years ago and doubled their share of the total.

The official vote as tabulated by The Associated Press was 53,734,985. It topped the turnout of 1958 by 5,811,023, and came close to the 54,253,000 predicted by state officials and observers in an Associated Press survey prior to the election.

Although a record for a non-presidential election year, it did not come close to the whopping 68,832,778 voters who cast ballots in the 1960 presidential election. Still, the 1962 total represented just under 65 per cent of the estimated eligible voters.

With all seats at stake every election, House votes are the only means of accurately comparing the results for both parties from year to year. This year's figures mostly tell a tale of a continued Democratic edge across the nation, but much smaller than the one they posted in their big sweep in 1958.

In all, Republican House candidates polled 24,116,473 votes nationwide for 47.11 per cent of the total. This compared with their 1958 figure of 19,843,471 for 43.29 per cent.

Democrats this year polled 26,948,221 votes for 52.63 per cent compared with 25,801,888 and 56.29 per cent in 1958.

House candidates of other parties attracted 130,217 votes compared with 188,116 four years ago. Republican gains were widespread, although most spectacular in the South. In fact, the Democrats increased their share of the House vote over four years ago in only six states: Connecticut, Delaware, New Hampshire, New Jersey, Idaho and Nevada. In New York, the vote breakdown was about as it was in 1958. In all the rest the Republicans gained ground.

The GOP jumped from 2.5 per cent to 29.2 per cent of the House vote in Alabama; from 11.3 to 33.1 per cent in Texas; from 20 to 39.8 in Virginia; from zero to 17.85 per cent in Georgia; from 35.3 to 51.9 per cent in Montana. The GOP also registered healthy increases in such other states as Colorado, Kansas, Florida, Louisiana, North Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee and Washington.

In all, the Republicans captured 1,910,601 votes in the South compared with only 594,215 four years ago, jumping from 16.3 to 31 per cent of the total. But the Democrats improved on their total, too, polling 4,244,527 for 68.75 per cent of the vote in that area. Four years ago they won 8.18 per cent of Dixie's House votes.

In the 32 states which have officially certified votes for governor, Republican candidates drew 50.14 per cent of the total with 18,537,748, while Democrats had 48.45 per cent with 17,910,000. Independent candidates had the rest.

But Democratic candidates led slightly in voting for the Senate, polling 21,390,756 to 20,889,225 for their Republican opponents and 154,888 for other candidates.

The Long Rifles were front-runners from the time of Daniel Boone to that of Andrew Jackson.

Name Drummer In Death Of York Divorcee

Victim Beaten About Head

YORK, Pa. (AP)—Police said today that a 31-year-old drummer from Pottstown will be charged with murder in the death of Marlene E. Perez after an autopsy showed the 27-year-old divorcee died of multiple contusions of the brain.

York police detective Harold F. McIlvain said that Harvey R. Robinson, who already has been charged with aggravated assault with intent to kill, would be taken before Alderman William Nickey for arraignment on a murder charge.

"The autopsy was performed Sunday at the York Hospital," said McIlvain. "The cause of death was multiple contusions of the brain with hemorrhage inflicted by blunt and applied force."

Miss Perez, who assumed her maiden name after her divorce, was found dead in her apartment Saturday. Police said she had been severely beaten on the head. They said there was evidence of a fight in the three-room apartment.

Sgt. Edward Pinkerton of the York Police said Robinson, a drummer with the King Twig Sextet, had appeared in the York area on musical engagements and apparently had been seeing Miss Perez.

Pinkerton said that Robinson, a native of Buffalo, N.Y., who is married and the father of three children, told officers he went to the apartment Saturday and found the door locked.

When he couldn't get an answer, Pinkerton quoted Robinson as saying, he went and summoned a friend who was an occupant of the same apartment building. The two forced a slide lock, entered the apartment and found Miss Perez dead, Pinkerton said.

FBI Man Named To Keep Eye On Highway Projects

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Bureau of Public Roads named Sunday a former FBI agent to watch for skulduggery in the federal aid highway program.

Highway administrator Rex M. Witton, in announcing the appointment of Frank A. Stanton as chief investigator in the Bureau of Public Road's Office of Audits and Investigations, said Stanton will be responsible for investigating allegations of impropriety in connection with the federal aid program.

Stanton, a native of Belmont, Mass., has been with the Bureau of Public Roads since 1957. Before that, he served as a special agent of the FBI in Knoxville, Tenn., Baltimore, and Wilmington, Del., and as a special assistant to Director J. Edgar Hoover.

He left the FBI in 1955 to become a special representative of the Commission on Government Security, established to recommend legislation in connection with civilian, industrial and military security programs.

20th Century Expects Heavy Loss This Year

NEW YORK (UPI) — DeWitt-laden 20th Century Fox Film Corp. said Sunday it now expects its loss for the year to be even larger than management had estimated late this summer.

For the 39 weeks ended Sept. 29 the movie maker said operations produced a loss of $16,816,241 against a deficit of $11,544,007 a year earlier.

This led the company to say that "estimated last quarter losses coupled with year-end special write-offs after credit for income tax loss carrybacks indicate a full-year loss for 1962 in the area of $30 million."

Fox said this increase of about $5 million over the loss management predicted a few months ago "results from disappointing grosses of pictures in general release, coupled with a consequent increase in reserves against the expected grosses of such pictures."

New York Embarks On Politeness Kick

By PATRICIA MCCORMACK

NEW YORK (UPI) — Manhattan's off on a politeness kick.

The sometimes gruff, tough city, you see, also has a tender side.

Where else can you get caught in a courtesy campaign that starts below ground and reaches all the way to penthouses?

The subways first were infected with the politeness bug. Personnel and riders were urged to use the magic words — please, sorry, thanks. Riders who gave seats to women were told in posters that the gesture made them "knights for a day."

The rash spread to cab drivers. It was said the cabbies were gruff, anti-social, rude. The cabbies reacted by denying the charges. Then they set out to prove that they, too, had manners.

Get Polite Answers

In contrast to the gruff old days, it's now possible to get a polite answer out of a cabbie when you ask a question. The newest courtesy campaign's directed at the service and maintenance personnel in apartments.

The workers include the cliff dwelling's "super" — a human with nerves taut as violin strings from handling crises tenants expect solved immediately.

The superintendent and his helpers take care of dropped plaster, bathtubs that overflow, and retrieve parakeets.

The apartment courtesy campaign was initiated by the Lefrak Organization, which controls properties in New York City.

Rather than call all the workers to courtesy classes, the organization has produced "Hey, you" — a booklet that teaches courtesy on a do-it-yourself basis.

Courtesy Will Calm

Proceeding on the optimistic assumption that the well-known salutation — "hey, you" — will disappear when courtesy is the watchword, the booklet reminds its readers that "most people, no matter how upset they get, will calm down and behave if you're courteous."

The organization maintains the courtesy primer can be helpful to anyone wanting to brush up on politeness. Samples of the preaches:

—Doctors say it takes fewer muscles to smile than frown. It's easier to do. It makes you feel easier doing it.

—Life is full of friction, like the axle of a car. The mechanic puts grease on the axle. You use courtesy. It cuts friction even better than axle grease.

—By trying courtesy you can only lose tension, friction, trouble and rudeness. You gain peace of mind, a happy job and pleasant people around you.

County Executive Urges Increase In State Beer Taxes

BALTIMORE (AP) — Baltimore County's new Republican county executive says an increase in the state beer tax is the best source for new tax revenues needed by the counties.

Spiro T. Agnew said Saturday he has instructed E. Scott Moore, the county solicitor, to study this and other revenue-producing measures.

New revenues must be found if the county is going to continue to provide the services expected by the electorate, Agnew said.

He said the beer-tax increase could logically provide the state with funds it could share with the counties.

Maryland's beer tax currently stands at 3 cents a gallon and ranks 47th among the 50 states. It has not been changed since prohibition ended.

A beer tax bill was defeated in the 1961 session of the general assembly and a new proposal is not likely to gain support from the Tawes administration.

Delegate A. Gordon Boone, D-Balto County, led the successful fight against increasing the beer tax in the 1961 Assembly.

23 Americans Held

HOMESTEAD AFB, Fla. (UPI) — An American Red Cross official said Sunday that release of Cuban invasion prisoners could have a "very, very salutary effect" on negotiations for release of 23 U.S. citizens held prisoner in Cuba.

Raymond S. Eaton, vice president of international relations for the Red Cross, said 23 was the last count he knew of citizens of the U.S. held in Cuba on a variety of charges. He said several of them were women.

Pentagon Appears Ready To Kill Skybolt Missile

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Pentagon civilian chiefs, it is now quite plain, want to kill the Skybolt missile as quickly as possible and board up the windows against the hurricane-force winds of protest that will blow down from Capitol Hill.

There seems to be no chance that the whole drama can be played out as fast as the civilian chiefs would like. For they are pushing something that substantial numbers of congressional military authorities and Pentagon military chiefs are against.

Congress will not let the Skybolt issue die, it is fair to assume, without finding out for the public how the Joint Chiefs of Staff feel about it. There has been remarkable official silence on this point, which contrasts starkly with the publicity that Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara gave the military leaders' views on the RS70 warplane last spring.

The chiefs "voted" four to one in McNamara's favor on that one. Only the Air Force member wanted to speed up the RS70 program. It is a good assumption that the chiefs of the services, if not Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, their chairman, must differ from McNamara and his civilian technical advisers on the Skybolt.

In fact, it is fairly well known that they do. But when asked for official comment, the Pentagon's spokesman takes refuge in this: "I am not going to make any comment on what the Joint Chiefs of Staff did or didn't do."

So the observer is left wondering whether military leaders views on controversial weapons decisions are to be only for confidential internal use — unless they more or less coincide with views of their civilian superiors as in the RS70 case.

Congress is not likely to settle for such a situation now any more than it has in the past. It insists on knowing what the "pros" think, and no doubt will bring out the chiefs' views on Skybolt in hearings in both Houses early in the new congressional session.

Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., already has said the service chiefs supported continuation of the Skybolt program, information which the Defense Department refuses to confirm.

The word from Nassau, where President Kennedy and Prime Minister Harold Macmillan met last week, is that Skybolt has had it, as far as inclusion in the new U. S. military budget is concerned. What the British will do, after staking so much on the mis-

Ann Landers . . . Answers Your Problems

DEAR ANN: I am a worried father who is appealing to you for help.

We have only one child, a son 10 years of age. My wife insists on putting hair-curlers on this boy at night. I think she also puts a bleach in his shampoo water because his hair seems to be getting lighter.

When the boy was younger she dressed him in fussy clothes and put lipstick and nail polish on him. She thought it looked cute. She kept his hair in long curls until he was five. I insisted on a haircut before he started to school.

Now I am seriously concerned because he likes to dress up in his mother's clothes and he'd rather play with girls than boys. Also he likes dolls and pays no attention to trains, trucks or boy games.

Please tell me what to do before we have a real problem on our hands.

DEAR DAD: You have a real problem NOW. Children who are treated as if they were members of the opposite sex often grow up to be homosexuals. Both your wife and your son need professional help.

The doctor may suggest adopting a little girl or taking a foster child into your home. Then perhaps your wife would stop trying to make a girl out of her son.

In the meantime you can take him fishing, to ball games and out hiking. Introduce him to the male world and encourage him to be a part of it.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: We are hard-working, middle income people. Our five children are grown and married. All of them get along well except our youngest son.

Hal never was able to manage on his income. Five years ago he borrowed a few thousand dollars from his brother to buy a house. Two years later he sold the house, bought a new car and rented an apartment. He never paid his brother back, nor has he ever mentioned the debt.

Last year Hal was evicted for non-payment of rent so we let him live, rent-free in a home which we own. We even paid his utility bills, but that wasn't enough. Now he is trying to borrow from us again.

The whole family is disgusted with him and I'm so upset I don't know what to do. Do parents have the right to say no to a son who can't seem to make it?

—CONSCIOUS STRICKEN

DEAR STRICKEN: Parents not only have the right to say no, they have an obligation. You are in trouble now because you didn't say no long ago. The rent-free bit (plus utilities yet) was no favor, it only delayed the day of reckoning. When Hal finds no one is going to be there with a safety net he'll stop jumping.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Our daughter, 21, is graduating from college in June. She and two girl friends are the only ones in their group who are not engaged or married. To listen to them talk you'd think they were ready for the Old Folks Home.

College to them is the Happy Hunting Ground. Failing there, they feel they are doomed to spinsterhood.

It's awful to see these girls so panicky. I'm afraid they might settle for anything in trousers between now and June just to prove they can get a man. Do you have any thoughts on this? —SAN JOSE

DEAR JOSE: The herd instinct is powerful. It takes maturity to keep from settling for a second-rater when you smell the orange blossoms all around you.

There is statistical evidence that the girl who waits until she is at least 22 stands a far better chance of enjoying a lasting marriage.

Are you going steady? Making marriage plans? If so, send for ANN LANDERS' booklet, "Before You Marry—Is It Love Or Sex?", enclosing with your request 20c in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

At the later service, the youth choir under the direction of Mr. Ernest Brown will present selections. Organist for the Christmas Eve services will be Mrs. Ernest Brown. The sermon to be delivered by Pastor Russell E. Fink will be titled, "Christmas in Prison."

The chapel choir under the direction of Mrs. Russell E. Fink will present Christmas selections at the morning service on Christmas Day. Mrs. Robert Beyer will be the organist. The sermon will be delivered by Rev. Robert B. Logan, and the Lord's Supper will be administered.

"The Greatest Story Ever Told" Is Being Filmed Quietly In Arizona Desert Area

By ARMAND ARCHERD
Central Press Association
Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD—The true story of Christmas is finally—and hopefully being filmed by Hollywood. It is the story of Christ in "The Greatest Story Ever Told." And it is being told by one of the most revered filmmakers in the business, Academy Award winner George Stevens.

It is, refreshingly, NOT a spectacular Biblical film. It is not an epic made in Europe with a cast of thousands. It is, strange to say, "Made in the U. S. A."

The story of Christ is being filmed in that majestic virgin desert-mountain country which spreads loftily along the Arizona-Utah borders, northeast of the great Grand Canyon, and west of the familiar Monument Valley which director

John Ford has immortalized on film.

This land of word-defying colors and mountain forms and carvings of nature through rocks the size of many Gibraltars has never before been photographed as a movie star. And it will never again be available for anyone to tell this or any other story.

The location site is near the trailer town of Page, Ariz. You will find it only on the recent maps, since its birth was due to the construction of the great Glen Canyon Dam which is due to be christened early in 1963.

It will be another rein on the mighty Colorado River. When its bold muscles of concrete will be permitted to stiffen, the waters of the Colorado will be held in check, backing up in respect for the man-made controls, and then, creating for the whim of its human masters, a lake, like Lake Mead behind Boulder Dam.

This new lake (Powell) will be 136 miles long and the waters which will fill the low and high deserts will create a magnificent playground for recreation-happy Americans. The lake will have a shore-line of 1,800 miles.

Under 800 feet of some of these waters will be the mammoth sets which George Stevens and his company built to tell the story of Christ in "The Greatest Story Ever Told." We visited them and can truthfully say they are the greatest sets ever built for a film in the United States.

The city of Jerusalem, the town of Nazareth, the house of Lazarus and the plains of the lands over which Christ and His Apostles plodded their weary ways are all carved into and out of the land of Utah, which according to George Stevens, more accurately resembles the land of the Bible today than the Holy Land at present.

The film will cost in excess of $10 million. It will perhaps cost twice this amount. Stevens and company are fighting the sands of time, just as the characters in the greatest story. He must complete his scenes in this desert before the flood waters engulf him.

Before the cameras began turning the soil of the desert, Stevens spent four years in research. He trekked to the Holy Land, spoke to every expert on the subject, taking in representatives from all the religions who could contribute to the accuracy of the story.

It is not a film to make a quick dollar on the expenditure of many,

Stevens hopes the film will still be a monument of film in 40 years, when the second millennium of the birth of Jesus will be celebrated.

Each player's script contains a notation from Carl Sandburg, who with Stevens, James Lee Barrett and several others, wrote the screenplay.

Pulitzer-winner Sandburg calls the attention of the actors to the fact this is more than a film—but indeed a living testament to the greatest story. His words have duly affected each actor who picks up the script to learn the lines.

The man who plays Jesus Christ is Swedish actor Max von Sydow. This is his first American-speaking film. For seven months, Stevens had him carefully tutored in the requirements of the role, and in proper speech.

We can faithfully report that

Von Sydow's speech is flawless. He has been taught not to speak with a super-educated accent, but rather with a common - denominator-type voice. Strong, yet soft; educated, yet not high-brow; forceful, yet kind.

Sydow is a thin, tall, 6-foot 4-inch blond, with blue eyes. His blond hair, however, is covered with a Biblical-like wig. He has a pair of hands like another Swede, Ingemar Johansson. He is married and has two sons. And he is the same age as Christ at the time of His Crucifixion.

When he was robbed and wigged, the resemblance was frightening. My daughter looked at him from the sidelines of the mountainside on which they were filming, and whispered to me, "Daddy, he looks just like you think of Jesus looking."

Director Stevens has ordered no pictures to be released of the sets or locations until the film is ready in 1964.

Stevens has also prohibited any pictures (still) of the players, particularly Max von Sydow, to be issued by his company's still department or publicity men. The crew and cast have been warned against shooting snapshots on the set.

Stevens wants to keep the "Greatest Story Ever Told" as "virginal" as possible until time for it to be seen. It is, of course, possible for tourists from hundreds of miles to converge on the sets by the thousands to look in silent awe at the sets which duplicate the story of Christ — and to snap pictures!

Will Of People Is Greatest Resource

Eli Ginzberg, professor at Columbia University's graduate school of business and a well known economist, has exploded a misconception frequently held concerning the ability of a country to develop its economy to a prosperous level.

One of the most important factors determining whether a country shall develop a high standard of living for its inhabitants or be included among the underdeveloped lands is its natural resources. Right? Wrong, says Professor Ginzberg.

Abundant resources are assets in developing an economy, but they are not the most important. It is the will of the people themselves which will determine whether a nation advances into higher plateaus of culture, living standards and leadership.

Professor Ginzberg compared Israel, with few resources and an energetic economy, to Brazil, which possesses great wealth in undeveloped resources but has a substandard economy. Japan is a have-not country which has become a world leader in industry and trade by the application of hard work. China, possessing vastly greater natural wealth, has failed dismally to inspire the incentive workers need.

Populations change their attitudes dramatically when given a reason. Exportation of American values following World War II has been given much of the credit for transforming such widely separated areas as France and Puerto Rico into leaders in economic growth after many years of existence with drifting, poverty-marked economies.

An Open Letter

Dear Dorothy Sokolsky:

Since King Features Syndicate has done me the honor to consider that I might possibly be the man to carry on in the space formerly occupied by George Sokolsky's column, I think that I should begin by telling about my relations with George. And I would like it to be an open letter to you, his wife for so many stirring years.

You could have knocked me over with a feather when Frank McLearn, George's good friend at King Features, called me up and asked if I'd like to tackle the job. You see, I had always thought of George as indestructible. True enough, I had heard of his heart attacks, his diabetes, and the cancer to which he had lost a kidney. But his ability to carry on in the face of physical affliction had become legendary. In the saga that went the rounds after one of his operations, he was represented as dictating a column ten minutes after he had come out of the ether. (Of him you could say even more aptly than of the Post Office, "Neither snow nor rain nor heat nor gloom of night stays this courier from the swift completion of his appointed rounds.")

I have no way of knowing how much George approved of me as a writer. But I like to think he would have accompanied the choice with a benevolent laying on of hands. For George had a great effect on a chapter in the history of the conservative revival in this country in which I happened to play a part, and I know that he once approved of me as an editor.

Back in the early Nineteen Fifties George was one of the few voices speaking up for America's traditional freedoms. He had his column, and, since he had the prophetic touch, he was in great demand as a speaker. But he knew that a movement, to be successful, had to consist of more than a few scattered individuals. George wanted to see a magazine established to attract young thinkers to his own standards of value and to provide a forum for their work. He was, as one of the obituary editorials said of him, an advocate of the decent things of life, the ancient and honorable verities, and he wanted to see young people in this country talking in terms of those verities.

So George threw himself into the deliberations and the money-raising that resulted in the creation of a magazine called "The Freeman," edited by Henry Hazlitt, Suzanne La Follette and myself. As a friend of Herbert Hoover, whom he called the Chief, George carried the battle to sustain our little magazine into high places. Though George was busy enough writing six newspaper columns a week, he was represented in our first issue with a characteristic essay, "Freedom—a Struggle." He used to drop into our cramped office on Madison Avenue to see how we were getting on and to ask how he could help us.

It soon developed that he was helping us far beyond the call of duty. When President Truman fired General Douglas MacArthur, George was properly outraged. He came into our office frequently to outline possible ways of vindicating MacArthur, and when a committee of the U.S. Senate held an inquiry into the dismissal of the great Pacific pro-consul—an inquiry that resulted in some millions of words of testimony—George suggested that "The Freeman" get out a supplement based on MacArthur's own response to his inquisitors. We tried to find someone who would be willing for the pittance we could pay, to go through the five volumes of the testimony. But no one would take on the formidable assignment.

So George, burdened though he was with work that must have kept him busy for sixteen hours out of every twenty-four, volunteered to reduce millions of words to an effective supplement. In time he delivered his manuscript, a succinct abridgment of evidence that will forever have historic value. "Here it is," he said as he threw the manuscript down on Miss La Follette's desk. "do what you will with it. I'm groggy."

That was George Sokolsky, willing to spend himself in the war for his exacting and passionately held standards of justice. Later, when "The Freeman" got into trouble because of disagreement among its backers, George tried to buy another magazine for its editors. He thought he had it arranged for us to take over the well-known "American Mercury." But the owner of the "Mercury" raised the price to George, and the deal fell through.

I know from "Freeman" magazine days that George Sokolsky approved of me once. I hope that in taking over his space I will not let him down.

Faithfully yours,
John Chamberlain

North Korea A Cloud On Far Eastern Horizon

PARIS

By Joseph Alsop

On the Far Eastern horizon, a cloud considerably bigger than a man's hand has now appeared, as a direct consequence of the deepening split between the Soviets and the Chinese Communists.

North Korea is the only Communist state which as yet deserves to be called the satellite of Peking. Albania, tiny and isolated, is more a pretext than a satellite. North Viet Nam is quite probably becoming a Chinese satellite; but thus far Hanoi has rather desperately tried to keep two lines open, to Moscow as well as to Peking.

Hence what the North Koreans say at this juncture is particularly meaningful, since it is said, one may be certain, under orders from the Chinese Communists. Needless to say, the Chinese position in the Sino-Soviet row received enthusiastic support in the just-published communique of the Fifth Plenum of the North Korean "Workers Party." But the significant passage runs as follows:

"Only when our defense capacity is fortified and steel-like and we are always in a posture of mobilization, will the enemy not dare to pounce upon us and if he launches a reckless adventure, can we decisively smash it and win the victory. . . . (To this end) our military potential must be reinforced at all costs, even if this slows down the growth of the national economy."

One reason for this bleak warning of harder times ahead for the Korean people may well be the abrupt interruption of Soviet arms deliveries. The Koreans, like the Chinese, have always got the bulk of their heavier and more complex military equipment from the Soviet Union. If the source of supply has been cut off, they may well embark on an attempt to provide at least a part of their own heavier arms.

If this interpretation is correct, the consequences for China will be vastly more grave than for North Korea. Some things the Koreans cannot conceivably attempt—such as the construction of a serious aircraft industry. The Chinese, on the other hand, will have to do all these things, and on a scale to supply their Asian satellite as well as themselves.

If arms deliveries from the Soviets have indeed been stopped, as seems highly likely, and oil deliveries have been halted at the same time, as also seems likely, Nikita S. Khrushchev is really hitting Mao Tse-tung where it will hurt the most. In the present desperate condition of the economy, it is hard to see how the Chinese system can withstand the enormous increase of strain that must result from increased fuel stringency plus an immensely increased armament effort.

Confirmation by intelligence must be awaited, for there are no solid proofs as yet that Khrushchev is using this kind of sanction against Mao. The North

Inside Washington

By Henry Cathcart

RATS—Officials are fighting an uphill battle to keep rat infestations under control on the grounds of the Washington Monument and the Jefferson Memorial. The fight came to light recently when a family visiting the area was attacked by a rat, although no harm came to them.

When a huge section of Washington slums was cleared out a few years ago, the rats migrated to the monument and memorial grounds where they've honeycombed bushy areas with nests and tunnels. Eye-witness reports say they can be seen scurrying around in broad daylight.

An official charged with maintenance of the shrines, admitted that the rats have become a serious problem. Four men are at work constantly, using gas and poison, to fight the rats, and 87 of them have been killed since last June.

But they seem to be multiplying faster than they can be eliminated, and the official admits it's an uphill fight.

Some Americans Are Spreading The Christmas Spirit In Reverse

By Drew Pearson

The New York Newspaper strikers, who are wiping out all newspaper profits for the current operating year and may put two papers out of business.

Gulf, Texaco, Cities Service, and American Oil companies, which are pushing the location of a 50-million-gallon oil tank in the middle of suburban Little River Mills, Va., whose citizens moved there to escape the oil and industrial fumes of the city.

Bona Fide Christmas Presents
In contrast, here are those who are making Christmas happier and more peaceful for others:

Renner Inc., of Philadelphia, which has been organizing a Christmas clean-up of surplus material located in cellars or attics for distribution to charitable institutions. It started when Renner cleaned up its unused paper stock, and Renner's Gordon Lange conceived the idea of both reducing the fire hazard and spreading good will by similar clean-ups among all the companies of Philadelphia.

John F. Kennedy and Secretary of Defense McNamara, who have built up the missile strength of the USA so that we are safer than ever and no longer in danger of becoming a second-class power.

Parade Magazine and Clayton Wallace, who pushed the White House for a direct phone or teletype connection between Kennedy and Khrushchev in order to prevent war by accident.

A Happier Christmas
Here are some people who could make Christmas even happier for others:

Peter Lawford — By letting his mother see her grandchildren and paying her more than an allowance of $150 a month.

Harry P. Davis, lobbyist for the Sun Oil Company — By withdrawing opposition to the confirmation of the Pennsylvania Air Pollution Board in a state which has to worry about industrial fumes.

Maj. Gen. Arno Lehman, commander of the U. S. Air Force in Turkey — By getting rid of your recreation director in Ankara and the hard-drinking WAC who commands him. While you didn't appoint them, their departure will help the otherwise fine job you are doing in the Near East.

Gene Zuckert, efficient Secretary of the Air Force — By keeping an eye on the expansionist generals at Dayton, Ohio, and making sure they use the surplus Crovelli-Colliers building at near-by Springfield, before they expand further at Patterson-Wright Field. The Crovelli-Colliers building has been empty and idle ever since Colliers Magazine folded, and its use could save the taxpayers a lot of money.

John F. Kennedy — by getting your friends and subordinates to quit kicking our staunch ally, the British, in the seat of the pants. Your old man was the most unpopular ambassador sent to Britain since the days of George Harvey, and some of the British don't realize that you have never shared his views. So why not let the diplomats, not the Defense Department, handle the delicate question of Skybolt, also remind Dean Acheson that his mother was a Canadian. Americans know that the last thing you want to do is revive the old bitterness that existed when your father and other Boston Irish were shipping money to Dublin to finance the Black and Tan revolt, but the British have long memories and may not know this.

Christmas Spirit

The most forlorn offices on Capitol Hill at the approach of Christmas are those of the defeated solons. For them, Christmas means there are only nine more days on the public payroll before they will be out in the cold. . . . Bravest front is being put up by Wisconsin's 78-year-old Sen. Alex Wiley, with the Santa Claus laugh and the Santa Claus shape. He tells everyone cheerily that he and his wife are in good spirits and are looking forward to the future. But intimates say the old man privately is broken-hearted over his defeat. . . . Utah's able, young Congressman Dave King, who lost his bid for the Senate, was offered a top job by the White House. However, he turned it down to return home and live among his people. He'll practice law and ponder the pleading of his friends that he run for governor in 1964.

Jim Bishop: Reporter

By Jim Bishop

How does a wife truly feel about her husband? It is difficult to say, because most of them learn to mask their disappointments. Most men learn to compromise. An enduring union consists of much work and little ecstasy. Many times, I have wondered if any wife is completely satisfied with her marriage. Now, I've found one.

She's a stranger to me, and her letter was somewhere in a stack of mail, but I plan to keep it. "Dear Mr. Bishop," she writes, "Sorry I missed your article on what you do not appreciate about women. Wonder if you included my favorite — women who gripe about their husbands? I don't know about the rest of them, but I chose mine all by myself."

"He was a bachelor for a long time before I found him. Said he was waiting for me. After age 30, he returned to school at night, while working, to get his master's degree. His skills are unlimited. His ambition is limited only by his moral principles. He has, as I think you once put it, more integrity than a man needs."

"He has temporarily given up all sports until our family can enjoy them with him." Loves to play cards if his wife is included in the party. Has a massive mind and small ego.

"Not vulgar. Never prudish. Lies constantly, especially about how beautiful his wife is and how favorably she compares with the most glamorous dolls. He is head of a family with two budgets: a tight one for mother, nothing for himself. The occasional windfall is for toys for the children, something fattening for mother, or a dozen roses."

"Likes to drink but never drunk. Smiles without being a smiler. Growls but never a growl. An Apollo in clothes or a bathing suit. Hates the water but races home every day in summer to take the children swimming. Has no paunch and never will because he eats too little and sits too little."

"Takes credit for an attractive home because he designed it and helped build it. Scrubs floors and washes windows if he feels they need it. He buys toys for his children. Helps the boys build the models. Pins the dresses on the dolls. Spends hours glueing a 29 cent toy, at the same time repairing a broken 4-year-old heart."

"He chews cigars, smokes cigarettes. Never the life of the party, and yet never deadwood. Likes people at once if he can't follow a road map, the road he takes is twice as interesting as the one he should have taken. He's the boss, but he's never bossy."

"As comfortable in black tie as in black overalls. Wears both frequently. Polishes his shoes. Presses his pants. Believes the only way to get out of trouble is to stay out of trouble."

"Doesn't have time to watch TV. Reads three newspapers a day and one magazine a week. He has a spellbound audience when he reads the belabored struggles of Jane and Dick. Makes a big fuss over every baby."

"He thinks four is a good start for a family. He is certain that each new one is cuter and smarter than the one before. For almost seven years, he has gotten up every single morning at six to change and feed the current baby. He also gets the older ones juice and he gets coffee for mother before she comes dragging out one hour later."

"He has a gorgeous head of frankly gray hair that grows straight up and is never more than an inch long. He is a young man with young ideas. Always has been. Always will be."

"Oh, but this is only a slight scratching of the surface. He is masculinity personified. Tenderness epitomized. He was an outstanding success as a paratrooper and thanks fate that put him in a prisoner-of-war camp for two years so that he could plan his future." He was the kind of teacher that parents and principals dream about and remember. Now he is a successful business executive. A successful husband. A successful father. A success.

"Sincerely,

You're Telling Me!

By William Ritt

Chicago's municipal Christmas tree, 80 feet tall, is actually a cluster of 140 trees wired together. What a splendid, glittering example of togetherness.

The space craft Mariner II has, at long last, taken its closeup view of the planet Venus. We still don't know why the gadget wasn't named the Peeping Tom II!

Mariner II speeded by Venus at a rate of 88,400 miles an hour, so, at best, its trip was just a brief flirtation!

According to a nature item, the leaves of a large elm tree evaporate as much as 50 barrels of water. That, you must agree, is quite a bit of perspiration.

There are 6,000 distinct varieties of grass — Factographs. Gosh, they sure do outnumber the lawnmowers!

It is estimated the world's total catch of fish annually reaches a figure in excess of 53 billion pounds. That certainly must include a lot of big ones which DIDN'T get away!

Try And Stop Me

By Bennett Cerf

Film star Paul Newman recalls the time he appeared as guest star on Garry Moore's "I've Got A Secret" TV panel show. The whole panel was lured up to a ball game at Yankee Stadium so that Newman, disguised as a white-coated vendor, could sell each of them a hot dog. Nobody recognized him. Henry Morgan even complained that he had been short changed. When Newman appeared on the TV show a few evenings later, the panel didn't come within a mile of his "secret."

The late and famous editor, Ellery Sedgwick, offered this challenging advice to a graduating class at Amherst: "It is my constant endeavor to persuade young men just starting their business careers that, instead of joining some company organized, successful, and regimented, they should sign up with a leaky ship, scrape down her decks, caulk her seams, refit her sails: for it is on the slipperiest decks that adventure beckons, and a speedier chance provided for rising in the world."

Overheard at a public school recess: "My father once ran away with a circus when he was a boy—but the police caught him and made him bring it back."

At a bridge party: "My son's new girl friend is so hefty she could play fullback for Ohio State. You know what she wears on her charm bracelet? Old license plates!"

In a men's locker room at the Century Golf Club: "My wife can now talk at the rate of 140 words a minute—with gusts up to 175."

Mt. Savage Man Will Exhibit His Railroad

MT. SAVAGE — James E. Lancaster, East Main Street, will display his Miniature Mountain Lake and Western Maryland Railroad to the public during the Christmas season.

The exhibit covers an area of 16 by 20 feet and occupies an entire room. "Miniatures in Miniature" have been added by Lancaster to the display. Included are a replica of the B&O "Tom Thumb", first locomotive used by that railroad in 1829, a replica of a C&P passenger train last used in 1929, and a replica of a Peerless traction engine.

The layout has nearly 700 feet of track, 96 freight cars, 40 engines, 16 passenger cars, a merry-go-round, ferris wheel with music, operating steam shovel, dinky engine and cars in operation, coal mine, well drilling machine, feed mill, passenger stations, theatres, churches, stores, houses, parks and waterfalls. There is also a super highway with four lanes on which cars travel in a realistic manner.

Each year visitors from surrounding towns call at the Lancaster home to view the exhibit. The display will be shown from this Wednesday through January 13 from 2 to 4 p. m. and 7 to 9 p. m.

Sen. H. F. Byrd Is Hospitalized In Baltimore

BALTIMORE, Md. (AP) — Sen. Harry F. Byrd, D-Va., has been a patient in a Baltimore hospital for six days, hospital officials said Sunday night.

Union Memorial Hospital would not reveal the nature of Byrd's ailment. A spokesman said, "He is doing nicely."

In Washington, there were reports that Byrd, 75, one of the most powerful men in the Senate, had entered the hospital for a checkup. Usually, a checkup would take only one or two days. In the past, Byrd often has been a spokesman for the conservative wing of the Democratic party. He is chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

The second-ranking Democratic member of that committee, Sen. Robert S. Kerr, D-Okla., suffered a heart attack a few days ago and is recuperating in a Washington hospital.

The Finance Committee will consider President Kennedy's proposed tax reduction measures if they are passed by the House.

Byrd is a former Virginia governor and has served in the Senate since March 1953.

Byrd's Baltimore physician declined comment when questioned by newsmen.

White Holiday Not Likely

By United Press International
Only residents in the northern mountain areas of West Virginia stand a good chance of having a white Christmas.

The U. S. Weather Bureau said snow would fall in most parts of the state Sunday night and Monday. It added that the only measurable amounts would be in the mountains.

A cold air mass moving into the state pushed temperatures below the freezing mark Sunday evening after most sections had experienced several days of comparatively mild weather.

State Police said the higher temperatures cleared most roads of ice and that driving conditions were good in most areas.

Beall Christmas Spirit Spread By Art Students

FROSTBURG—Some of the busiest people at Beall High School before the Christmas holiday were the art students, who added to the spirit of the season by decorating windows and doors throughout the school.

They constructed snow men, from plywood and masonite. The lobby doors were decorated by Linda Scarpelli and Paula Drummond, 11th grade students. Paula also constructed and painted an angel and Santa Claus from plywood.

The office of Joseph H. Pellerzi, school principal, the office of the school secretary, Miss Esther Geiger, the faculty doors and the cafeteria doors also were painted for the holidays.

Participants in the project also included Sandy Broadwater, John Crowe, Cathy Davis, Sally Densmore, Georgia Duncan, Dorothy Finley, Bonnie Fisher, Kathleen Kenney, Joe Livingston, Sandy Lloyd, Marsha McGreevey, Glen Michaels, Wade Phillips, Betty Sigler, Rose Wade and Mary Jo Watkinson. Various eighth and ninth graders also helped to decorate.

The supervising teacher was Mrs. Lucille Cinquegrani, head of the art department.

Dorcas Bible Class Marks Holiday Season

ELLERSLIE — Dorcas Bible Class held their Christmas party in the Methodist Church hall. Christmas decorations were used on the table and following refreshments, jingle gifts were exchanged. Mrs. Ethyl Kendall gave a reading, "The Everlasting Light" and Miss Lillian Cook read "No Room In The Inn."

A gift was presented to Mrs. Marian Chambers. Games were played and prizes were given. Members present were Mesdames Evelyn Hafer, Kathleen Clapper, Marie Simpkins, Anna Lowery, Hazel Griffey, Miriam Williams, Mariam Chambers, Flo Griffey, Lydia Porter, Erma Burkett, Grace Waltman, Ethyl Kendall, Marguerite Wisler and Miss Lillian Cook.

This Christmas, avoid buying toys that break easily and leave sharp, jagged edges — or toys with small, loose parts that can be swallowed. Make your child's Christmas merry and bright by making his gifts thoughtful and right.

Mrs. Karl Siever, left, and her daughter, Mrs. William Jeffries are shown examining a huge Christmas wreath which the latter made as part of the decorations in the Rose Room of the Rose-

Huntington Woman Faces Murder Count

Beats Husband With Oak Club

HUNTINGTON, W. Va. (UPI) — Mrs. Bernice Wheeler, 27, Huntington, has been charged with murder in the fatal beating of her husband Hiram at their home Saturday.

Wheeler died in a local hospital Saturday night. The Cabell County Sheriff's office said Mrs. Wheeler admitted beating her husband with a large oak club.

Wheeler was found unconscious on the bedroom of the couple's home by sheriff's deputies who had gone to the house to serve drunk warrants on both the husband and wife. Authorities said four children were also in the house.

Mrs. Wheeler was not at home but was picked up a short time later.

Cancelled Wheeling Meet Won't Shift To Waterford Park

WHEELING, W. Va. (UPI) — Wheeling Downs President James F. Edwards said Sunday the winter meet originally scheduled to begin at his track Dec. 26 would not be shifted to Waterford Park.

Downs officials cancelled the winter meet last week after the plant had been partially destroyed by a $1.5 million fire.

Edwards said his office had received numerous inquiries about the possibility of shifting the meet to Waterford. But after careful consideration by his staff, he said it was decided that Waterford was not adequately equipped to provide for the needs of patrons, horsemen or horses during the winter.

The decision means that horse racing in the area will not begin until Waterford begins its regular spring meeting March 30.

A track spokesman said it now is considered doubtful whether the Wheeling oval could be repaired in time to begin its spring season as scheduled on May 30.

Admitted To Hospital

FROSTBURG—William Wilson, Lonaconing; Mrs. Olin Rounds, Lonaconing; and Sandra Lancaster, RD 1, Frostburg, were recently admitted to Miners Hospital.

W. Va. State Government Is Human, Comical

Editor's Note: This is the fourth of five dispatches reviewing the year in West Virginia. The stories will summarize the Top Ten stories of 1962, the year in government and politics, business and industry, the lighter side of the news, and sports.

By JERRY BEIGEL

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI) — There's a human — even a comical — side to the normally humdrum business of state government, as proved by events during 1962.

There was, for example, the case of Howard Cook, which proved that the long arm of the law does not always have a closed fist at the end of it.

It took a lot of courage for Cook to walk into the governor's office one day early in December — he could easily have gone to prison for it.

Formerly from Pocahontas County, Cook, 54, a convicted bank robber and a fugitive from the law, came back to West Virginia after living a law-abiding life for some 20 years in the Pacific Northwest.

When arrested in the state of Washington in 1958, the governor there refused to extradite him to West Virginia because he felt the man was completely rehabilitated and deserved the chance to continue his normal life there.

When Cook's attorney requested a full pardon from West Virginia, Gov. W. Barron said he could not consider such action until Cook returned.

After many months of deliberation, Cook returned to West Virginia early this month and gave himself up to the State Police. Without fanfare and without hesitation, Barron issued him a full pardon.

While most of the time was spent on a business-like routine by workers at all levels at the state capitol, there were occasional time-outs this past year from the usual decorum.

The one-day visit the beauty contestants made to Charleston last summer before returning to Huntington for the finals of the Miss U.S.A. contest gave some truth to that old adage "the grass is always greener on the other side of the fence."

When the contestants turned up at the governor's mansion, many department heads and employees

West Virginia Employees Enjoy Four-Day Holiday

By JERRY BEIGEL
United Press International

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI) — The four-day holiday vacation granted to statehouse employees probably is being used by most of them to rest up from Christmas parties thrown by most departments at one time or another last week.

The climax came Friday afternoon when about half a dozen of the major departments hosted parties which were attended by employees of other divisions.

The Beer Commission party featured samples of the business it regulates. The same, unfortunately, could not be said of the party given by the budget division.

A model of the West Virginia Pavilion to be built for the New York World's Fair in 1964-65 will be on display at the Statehouse after the first of the year.

A State Commerce Department spokesman said the model is being crated in New York and should arrive later this week. It measures about 5 feet by three feet wide, is 18 inches high and is an exact replica of the finished building.

Preliminary plans are for the model to be placed in the governor's reception room at the Statehouse, then move it to the second floor when the Legislature convenes Jan. 9.

The spokesman added that West Virginia is far ahead of all other states except New York in its construction schedule and that there should be no difficulty in having the pavilion completed by April, 1964.

He said a second, less detailed model of the pavilion, with a removable top, also will be sent along for inspection by prospective vendors who wish to put in displays or contract for concessions.

Motor Vehicles Commissioner Jack Nuckols has prepared a detailed outline of West Virginia's new driver point system which went into effect last Nov. 1. Nuckols said interested persons may obtain a copy of the pamphlet by writing to the State Department of Motor Vehicles, Charleston, W. Va.

Right now, Nuckols may be facing some problems in the future of the point system, designed to eliminate irresponsible drivers from the highways.

The Board of Public Works voted last week to cut funds Nuckols sought in his 1963-64 budget request to administer the point plan. The cutback totaled $200,000.

The board also recommended that Nuckols receive only $60,000 of a proposed $150,000 deficiency appropriation sought for the program for the remainder of the current fiscal year.

Dave Tork, former West Virginia University pole vault star, is now employed by the State Commerce Department.

Tork was released by the U. S. Marines recently and the Commerce people believe he will be a valuable asset in promoting West Virginia during efforts to attract new industry and tourists.

A department official said Tork is studying the department's goals and procedures and will later be given assignments that will be of most benefit to the state.

Tork, one of only four men who have pole-vaulted over 16 feet, is preparing himself for competition in coming track meets on grounds provided by Union Carbide. Tork hopes to be able to qualify for the 1964 Olympics at Tokyo.

feel like taking the bus, he airily told her to use the governor's car.

A few hours later, she reported "mission completed" and that it had only taken her a few minutes to drive downtown in the governor's car. On closer questioning the girl said she had walked into the governor's reception room, obtained the keys to the Cadillac and had run the errand without further ado.

A receptionist in on the gag said the whole thing was a stunt cooked up by the secretary as something for her boss to remember her by. She was going back to school the next week and was ready to tell him politely that she was sorry if he said he thought such a act might get him into trouble.

Another story concerning the governor's car had a somewhat lighter twist. But a summer-replacement secretary in the State Education Department gave her boss some anxious moments. It seems a department official wanted his secretary to transact some business in downtown Charleston and, when she said she didn't

Patterson Confident Of Return Bout With Liston In March Or April

Ex-Champ Floyd Expects Pact To Be Honored

Baltimore And Vegas Mentioned As Possible Sites

YONKERS, N.Y. (UPI)—Floyd Patterson, back from training camp Sunday to spend Christmas at home here with his family, said he is confident of a return title fight with heavyweight champion Sonny Liston in March or April.

Floyd has been training at his camp in Highland Mills, N.Y., for more than six weeks.

"In spite of all the different stories being given out by different people about my return fight with Sonny," Patterson explained, "the fact remains that Sonny and I have a solid contract for a return title fight."

"Sonny wants the return fight—wants to keep his word. And I want it because that's the only way I can win back my championship. And I'm determined to get that title back."

Where would the fight be held?

"Las Vegas (Nev.) and Baltimore are under consideration," Floyd said.

Proposed Round - Robin

A reporter reminded Floyd that Liston recently proposed at Toronto to a round-robin, in which Liston would make his first defense against ex-champion Ingemar Johansson of Sweden, and Floyd would fight young Cassius Clay. Then the two winners would fight for the title. Liston recommended the round-robin because he said each of the three bouts would draw "a lotta money."

"It was a good story," said Floyd, "but Sonny knows who he is fighting next."

Liston has said many times that he wants to get the return fight with Patterson out of the way so that "I can go ahead and make me a lotta money without gettin' tangled up in a flock of law suits."

Big Sonny Complains

Big Sonny, who won the title from Patterson on a first-round knockout at Chicago on Sept. 25, has been making personal appearances as champion, but he complains he is scarcely earning "eatin' money."

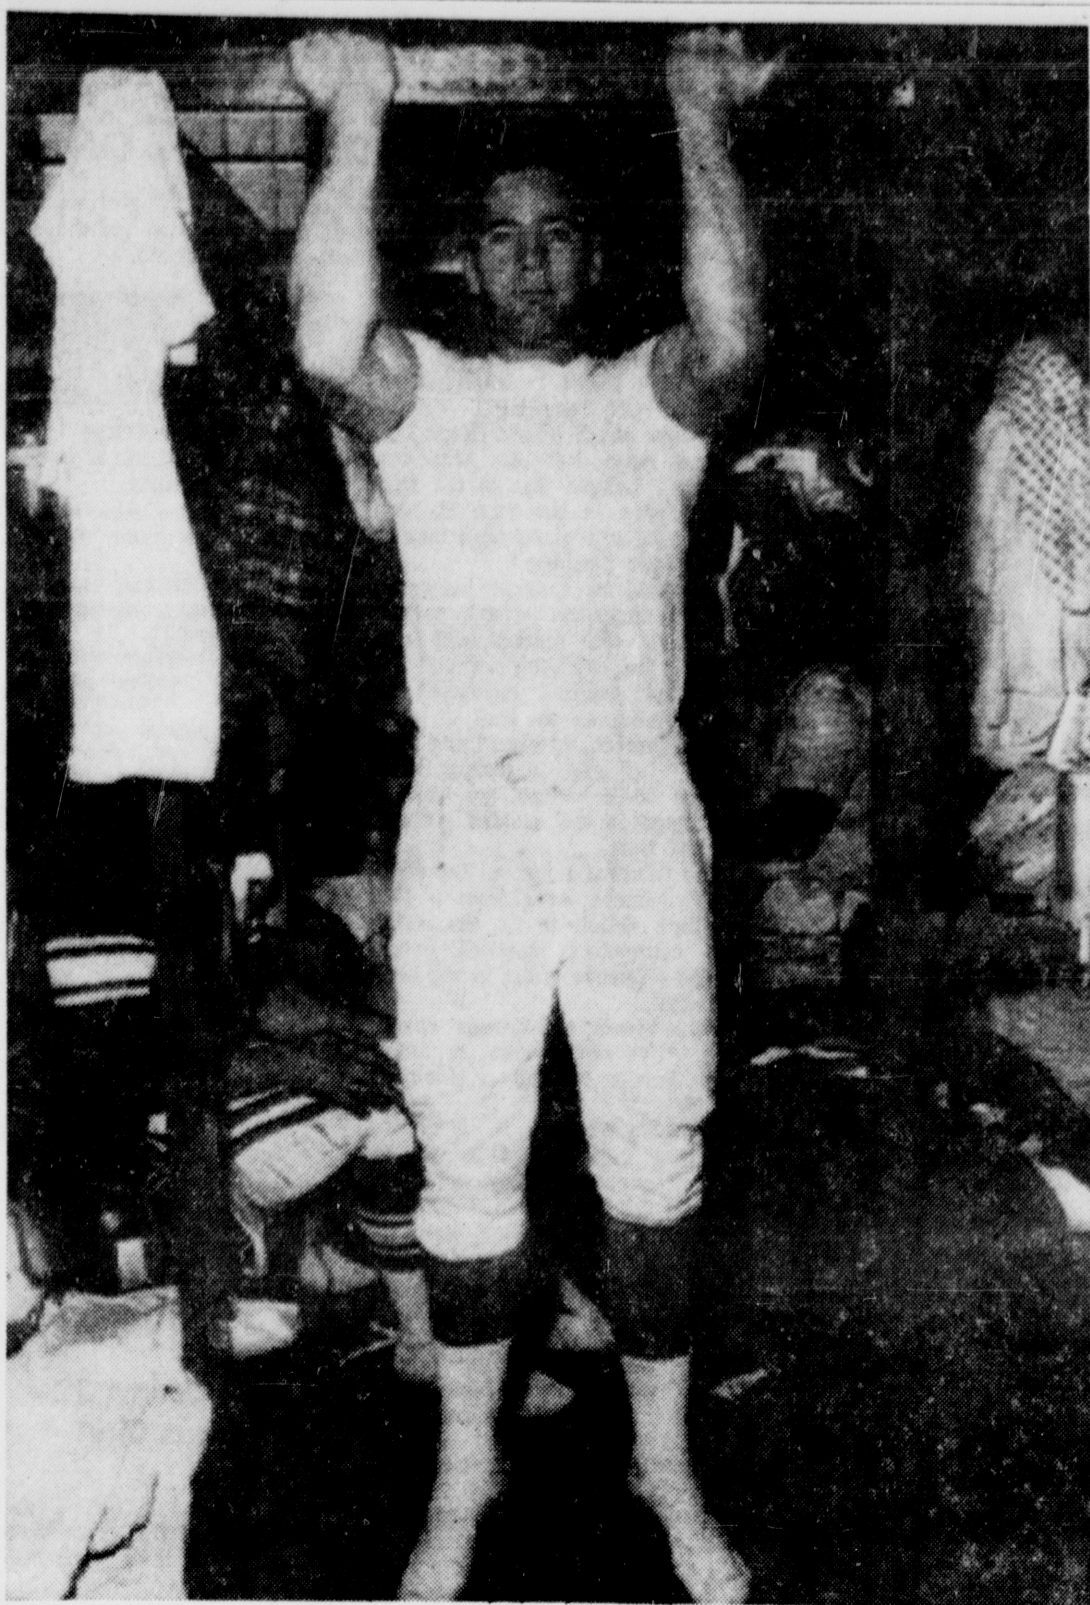

Jack Nilon, Liston's advisor, claims that Championship Sports Inc. still owes Sonny $207,000 from the Sept. 25th fight that CSI promoted, and Nilon warns that if Sonny doesn't get the money by Christmas, he will declare the return bout contract with Patterson "completely shattered," and will fight light heavyweight champion Harold Johnson at Baltimore, March 18, and Johansson in Goteborg Sweden, in July.

Jay Robertson Playing For East In Shrine Game

By DICK BARNES

Associated Press Sports Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—A football player who was supposed

never to play again may help crippled children overcome similar odds as they battle to walk.

He's Jay Robertson, a center

from Northwestern who will play for the East against the West in the Shrine game in San Francisco

Dec. 29 for the benefit of crippled

youngsters in the Shriners Hospital.

His story begins with his youth in Evanston, Ill., home of Northwestern. His father was Northwestern football manager and Jay dreamed of someday playing the same game.

"It meant so much to me when I was younger just thinking about it," he says now. The family moved to Kansas City but that didn't change Jay's thinking.

Came On His Own

"We couldn't give him a scholarship or anything," says Northwestern Coach Ara Parseghian,

"and he had lots of offers from the Big Eight schools. But he came to Northwestern on his own."

Jay was to make his varsity debut in 1959 even though he was a lineman weighing less than 180 pounds. But in a pre-season tackling drill, he suffered a left shoulder separation.

"I really wanted to be part of that team," he recalls. "But the injury knocked me out and so I had an operation to mend the shoulder.

"But then the arm atrophied—

it just went limp when it came out of an upper body cast after six weeks. The muscles were nothing."

"We thought he'd never play again," says Parseghian, who's here as an assistant East coach.

Never Despaired

"I knew for the meantime I was incapacitated," continues

Robertson, a handsome chap.

"But the feeling of despair was never there. I knew somehow I'd get the arm back to work. My problem was that I had to improve by spring so I could make the team for 1960.

"I did a lot of basic exercises, including swimming. Just trying to extend my arm out to the side

from his hanging position was my hardest exercise. For a while it would only go up a little bit, but I just kept at it.

"In a couple of months it was working enough so I could lift

weights, which helped the arm build up that much faster.

"When I started to put on more weight with the exercises I kept it up. Now I'm nearly 200 pounds and I've never had any trouble with the shoulder since."

Robertson lettered in 1960 and says Parseghian, "turned out to be one of the finest players we ever had and was elected out

captain for 1962."

Robertson will be the eighth person to receive the club's special achievement award. Last year's recipient was Edward (Ebbie)

Finzel, veteran soccer and basketball coach at Beall High School.

An official since 1934, Roby has worked games in the Southern Conference, Atlantic Coast Conference, the Steel Bowl in Pittsburg, the West Virginia Conference tournament and important

home contests at Duquesne University.

He also had the distinction of being one of the officials at a game which drew the largest crowd in the south (Maryland-

North Carolina at College Park before 15,100 fans in 1957).

The past few years Roby has curtailed his whistle-blowing activities. However, he continues to work some high school games and contests involving area colleges.

Tickets for the dinner are on sale at agencies throughout the city. All proceeds go to the Alle-ghany County League for Crippled

Children.

ARE YOU KIDDING?—It's a nice safety jacket that Marcia

Henderson is wearing here to warn hunters not to shoot at her, but how do you explain the lettering on it, which reads:

"Don't Shoot, I'm a Man?" Most hunters around Vincennes,

Ind., where the picture was taken, know a dear—or deer—

when they see one.

Packers Drill Prior To Break For Christmas

GREEN BAY, Wis. (UPI)—The Green Bay Packers went through a frigid 45-minute workout Sunday, then disbanded for Christmas and a breather in their training for the National Football League title game at New York Dec. 30 against the Giants.

The entire team turned out in 15 degree weather this morning with a 20-mile-an-hour northwest wind making the workout that much colder.

Coach Vince Lombardi, feeling the bite of the wind, joined the team in calisthenics to keep warm, and then cut 15 minutes from the planned one-hour workout because of the cold.

The team went through routine offensive plays and spent 15 minutes on giant offensive moves. The workout was on the club's practice field instead of in City Stadium for the first time, after plows moved some three inches of snow from the practice field. The Packers again wore tennis shoes for footing on the frozen turf.

Lombardi expressed satisfaction with the workout and with a wide smile wished his defending champions a Merry Christmas before they headed home to their families. The Packers swing back in to practice on Wednesday.

Mims Proves Good Substitute In Garden Bout

Holly Gives Carter Stiff Competition

NEW YORK (UPI)—Middleweight contender Rubin (Hurricane) Carter won a unanimous decision Saturday night over veteran Holly Mims, who provided unexpectedly stiff competition for a seven-hour substitute in the year's last nationally televised fight at Madison Square Garden.

There will be no TV fight next Saturday night because the sponsors are televising the final of the Holiday-Festival Basketball Tournament at the Garden.

In fact, the holiday week's only show of any importance seems to be next Friday's 10-rounder at the Los Angeles Olympic Auditorium, where Apollonio Salinas and Jose Lopez, two of Mexico's best bantamweights square off. Each has lost but one bout in his professional career.

Television fights will be resumed on Saturday, Jan. 5, when junior middleweight champion Denny Moyer of Portland, Ore., meets Joey Archer of New York in a non-title 10-rounder at the Garden.

In Saturday night's fight, Carter of Paterson, N. J., was floored by substitute Mims of Washington, D. C. in the fourth round by a right to the chin. Carter, favored at 4-1, was up at the count of one and took the mandatory eight-count on his feet. That was the only knockdown of the bout.

Carter, 25, weighed 155 1/4 pounds Mims, 33, scaled 160 1/2.

HOUSTON (UPI) — Tommy Brooker's 25-yard field goal 17 minutes and 54 seconds into the first annual Crusade Bowl here Jan. 6 turned in outstanding performances in post-season contests Saturday.

Bill Tobin, University of Missouri 200-pound halfback was voted top back of the Bluebonnet Bowl game in Houston as his team upset Georgia Tech, 14-10. Tobin is a draft pick of the San Francisco 49ers.

Another Missouri player, guard Bill Siekierski, a draft choice of the Baltimore Colts, also will play in the Crusade Bowl, which will feature draft selections of the National Football League's eastern and western divisions in a game that will benefit the American Cancer Society.

Bobby Brevena, a University of Houston fullback, scored two of his team's touchdowns in a 49-21 victory over Miami of Ohio in the Tagerine Bowl at Orlando, Fla.

A Baltimore Colt draftee, Willie Richardson of Jackson, Miss., State, was voted outstanding back for the South in the North-South All-Star game at Miami.

Two draft choices of the Washington Redskins scored the two touchdowns for the North in that game. They were Lonnie Sanders, halfback from Michigan State, and Dave Francis, Ohio State fullback.

was only the second time a professional football title had ended in sudden death. In 1958, the Baltimore Colts defeated the New York Giants in overtime to win the National Football League Championship.

Brooker had put the Texans in front in the first quarter on a 16-yard field goal and Ab-Jaynes scored on a 28-yard run from Dawson and a two-point run to give the Texans a 10-0 lead.

The complexion of the game changed completely in the second half as a cold damp northern wind buffeted the stadium, overflowing with an AFL record crowd of 37,000.

The Oilers allowed Dallas to take the Texans' own end of the field for the first time in the second half, but the Oilers got the field back and tied it up with six minutes left in the game on chubbies Charlie Tolar's one-yard run.

Blanda, who had hit Willard Sweatall with a 15-yard scoring pass in the third quarter, kicked a 31-yard field goal in the fourth quarter enroute to the regulation tie.

Brooker's kick was blocked by Texas linebacker Sherill Headrick. The Oilers, who had five passes intercepted in all, lost two of them in the "fifth quarter."

Johnny Robinson picked off one of them and Hull the other — an important one.

Spikes, who was the game's leading rusher with 77 yards, was tied the outstanding player.

Texan coach Hank Stram had ended the game with both Spikes and Curtis McClinton in the same field as running backs with Spikes moved to flanker. McClinton rewarded Stram with a 70-yard performance to go with Spikes' 77. Haynes was the leading pass receiver for the victors with three for 45 yards.

Blanda, who has had trouble avoiding interceptions all season, early off the five he suffered Sunday by completing 23 of 46 attempts for 261 yards.

But the two "fifth quarter" interceptions and three during the regulation playing time were just a much.

The Oilers, who earned $1.1 million each as the losers, outlived the Texans 359 yards to 7.

Dawson, the league's leading passer, attempted only 14 and completed nine for 88 yards.

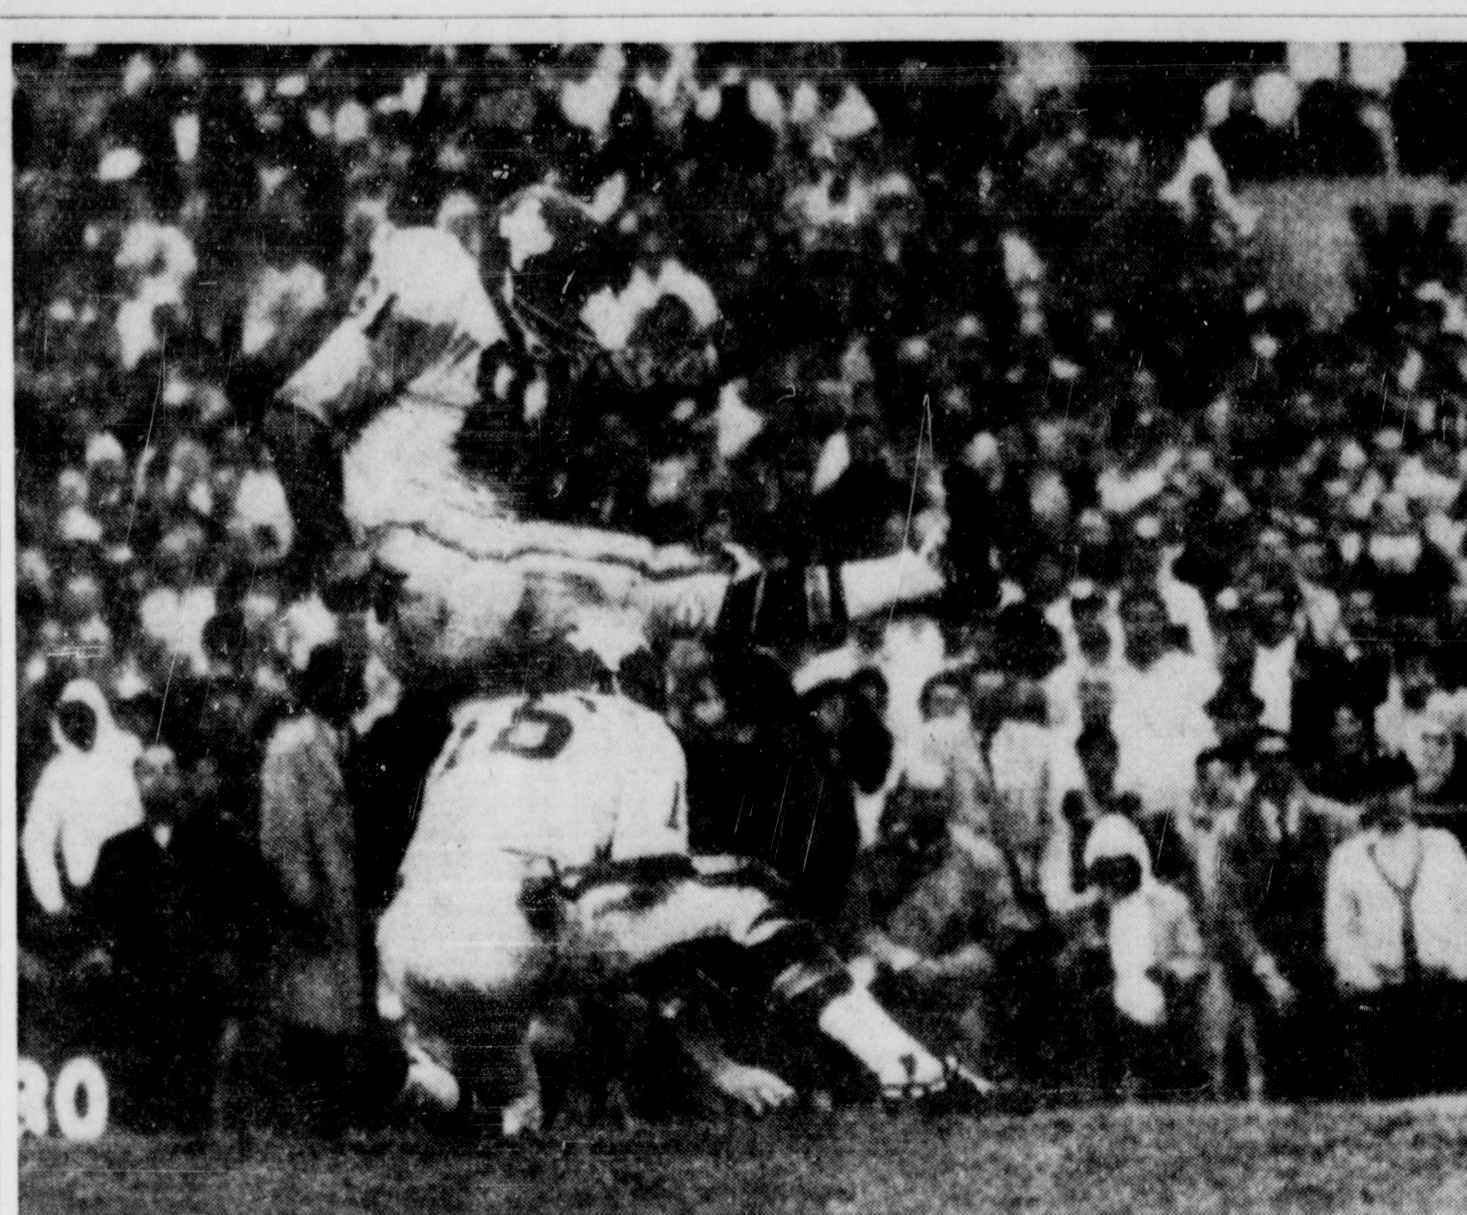

But the Oilers threw him for yards in losses trying to pass the last half.

The two teams had finished the regular AFL season with identical 3-3 win-loss records.

King Pleased At WVU's Play Except For Shooting

Mountaineers Hit Only 30 Per Cent In Kentucky Loss

MORGANTOWN, W. Va. (UPI) — "You can't win many ball games when you make only 30 per cent of your shots."

That was how West Virginia basketball coach George King summed up his team's defeat 79-75 by Kentucky Saturday night in the finals of the Kentucky Invitational tournament.

The Mountaineers made their first four shots to take a quick 8-0 lead at the outset and maintained their advantage throughout the first half, taking a 34-29 lead into the dressing room at intermission.

But Kentucky took the lead at 47-46 and stayed in front.

King said he was actually pleased with his team's performance except for the shooting. The coach said they had many good chances to come back and win but would miss the easy layup or the one-and-one foul shots.

The Mountaineers took Sunday off, but a practice is scheduled for Monday to get ready for the Holiday Festival Tournament in New York which begins Wednesday. The team opens the tournament Wednesday afternoon when it meets Boston College, WVU and seventh ranked Illinois have been made co-favorites in the tourney which runs through Saturday.

King said the team would fly to New York Tuesday morning and hold a workout there later that day. He said Bob Camp, who had been out with an ankle injury, has recovered and will replace Gary McWilliams on the traveling squad. The coach said he had not yet decided on the starting lineup against Boston College.

Hitchler May Play In Shrine Contest

STANFORD, Calif. (UPI) — Conrad Hitchler, star end from the University of Missouri, was given a 50-50 chance Sunday of being able to play in the East-West Shrine game.

Hitchler suffered a broken nose Saturday while playing in the Bluebonnet Bowl at Houston, Tex. Missouri coach Dan Devine, who also will coach the West team said Hitchler had an even chance of being in good enough shape to play in the Shrine game at San Francisco Saturday.

Oiler Loss Will Cost Ivy Sleep For Years To Come

Coach Figured His Team Had Dallas On Ropes

By ALEX ADWAN
United Press International

HOUSTON, Tex. (UPI) — Houston Oiler coach Frank (Pop) Ivy, whose team lost its American Football League title to the Dallas Texans in overtime Sunday, said, "I'll lose sleep for years to come over that one."

Ivy said he thought his team had the victorious Texans, "on the ropes all the second half and even in the overtime period," but "we just couldn't capitalize on all the chances we had."

"We handcuffed everything they tried," Ivy said, in looking back at the 20-17 victory the Texans concocted in the sudden-death playoff time.

The Oilers did just as Ivy said. They bounced back from a 17-0 halftime deficit to tie the score and completely throttled every Dallas offensive effort in the second half.

Hank Stram, the Texans' coach said, "I've never seen a team work harder to win a football game."

Wanted To Win

"These kids wanted to win a football game and they went out and did it," Stram said. "Houston was too good a football team to not come back like they did. We knew it might happen, but they did it despite all we could do."

Rookie Tommy Brooker, whose 25-yard field goal in the "sixth period" was the telling blow, said, "It never occurred to me that I would miss."

Abner Haynes, the Texans fleet halfback who played much of Sunday's game in the unfamiliar role of flanker so that Jack Spikes and Curtis McClinton could both be in the game as running backs, said:

"It took us three years to get it, but boy is it worth it. I thought I'd go blind before it was over." Haynes, who scored both of the Texans touchdowns, cut an eye in the third quarter and was bothered with bleeding the remainder of the game.

Offers Explanation

Stram also offered an explanation for what appeared to be a weird decision on the Texans part to kick off opening the sudden-death playoff, giving Houston the advantage of choosing the wind at its back as well as possession of the ball.

"The players were excited and tugging Abner (Haynes), the game captain. He just didn't understand the option. It was a mistake you don't like to make, but there is no use crying over it."

Houston quarterback George Blanda who had five passes intercepted, missed one 47-yard field goal and had one 42-yard attempt blocked, said that the field goal that was blocked, "was going straight for the uprights and would have been good. I just know it would, it felt good."

That field goal, if it had been successful, would have put the Oilers 20-17 in the fading minutes

Paper Reports Laver To Turn Professional

SYDNEY (UPI) — The morning newspaper Daily Telegraph Monday headlined a front page story stating that Wimbledon champion Rod Laver will turn professional this week.

The newspaper said Laver's name has been included in the program for a professional tennis tournament, scheduled to begin at the White City on Jan. 5.

The story also said that a sports goods company

The gray haired woman can wear many colors

Secrets Of Charm by John Robert Powers

Color-Cued To Soft Gray Hair

Gray-haired women were in the limelight in a recent prestige fashion show. The fashions, for every hour of the day, were modeled by ten truly elegant society women and all with gray hair. Their clothes, color-cued to their soft gray hair, were all understated, and yet all trends of the season were interpreted.

Their infinite poise and grace proved once again what we constantly emphasize: Charm is enhanced by maturity.

Their clothes ranged from classic town suits to grand scale evening clothes. Featured were the soft blues, the soft beiges. It may seem strange to think of beige, but one of the most chic costumes was in beige tweed... a suit and tunic coat and the brown fleck emphasized the model's brown eyes and was most flattering and youthful looking. Interesting was a beautiful shade of red — Oriental "Person Rose" — a rich bright shade that enhanced the gray-haired woman's coloring.

Taupe and platinum... a very soft, subtle color scheme — and flattering, too — was one of the most attractive satin ball gowns. The blues ranged from sea-foam to soft blue to navy.

To give sparkle to gray or graying hair there are color creme rinses that are very easy to use. Some are silver, and others remove the well-known yellow cast, giving a new high-light and gloss to light gray or white hair. Besides being color rinses, many are conditioners that make hair easier to manage. There's no mixing — the rinse goes on right from the bottle to the hair after shampooing and doesn't streak. The rinse comes out with the next shampoo. If you don't find the rinse best suited to your shade of gray in the department stores, talk to your beautician; she'll be able to recommend the best treatment for your hair.

Tree For Prisoners

MIAMI (UPI) — A majestic, 20-foot-tall Christmas tree was set up to greet Cuban invasion prisoners at the Dinner Key Auditorium Sunday. The tree was furnished by Mrs. Marcos Perez Jimenez, wife of the former Venezuelan dictator who is in a Miami jail awaiting possible extradition to Caracas on charges of stealing millions of dollars from the national treasury.

Ex-Prisoners On Hand

HOMESTEAD AFB, Fla. (UPI) — About a dozen members of the Pig's Bay Invasion Brigade 2056, released from Cuban prisons last year because of their wounds, waited Sunday to greet their comrades. Luis Morse, who suffered a shoulder wound in the fighting on Giron Beach, waited for his father. Also on hand was Roberto San Roman to greet his brother, Jose, one of the three brigade leaders on whose head a Cuban military tribunal placed a freedom price tag of $500,000 each.

GOREN ON BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN

(c 1962, By The Chicago Tribune)

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ
Q. 1—With both sides vulnerable, your right hand opponent opens with one diamond and you hold:

♠A J 10 5 3 2 ♥6 4 2 ♦7 ♣A K 2
What action do you take?
A.—One spade. While this hand is slightly better than a normal opening bid, we nevertheless prefer a simple overall to the take-out double. It is our belief on this hand that, unless partner is able to take voluntary action, there will be no game, and a vulnerable overcall even at the level of one should be treated most respectfully by partner.

Q. 2—Both vulnerable and as South you hold:
♠Q 5 2 ♥A 9 8 6 2 ♦K Q 10 ♣J 6
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♥ Pass
2 ♠ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—Three no trump. A jump bid is indicated for the purpose of acquainting partner with the high card values possessed by the partnership. A mere bid of two no trump by you at this point would be regarded as a bid made under some pressure. The jump is therefore recommended to describe that you have an above average hand.

Q. 3—You are South, vulnerable, and you hold:
♠K J 5 ♥A K J 9 3 ♦K 10 6 ♣K 4
The bidding has proceeded:
East South West North
1 ♠ Double Pass 3 NT Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—It is quite clear that East has thrown a red herring across your trail. Your partner's hand is equal to a very good opening bid. Remember that he could have shown a strong hand by jumping to two no trump. His jump to three, therefore, shows a hand of great value. We would be inclined to take our chances on a direct ask bid, but surely we would bid at least five no trump.

Q. 4—Both vulnerable, and as South you hold:
♠A 10 5 ♥Q J 6 ♦J 7 3 ♣Q J 9 5
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♦ Double 1 NT ?

What do you bid?
A.—Double. By proceeding along the lines of simple arithmetic we reach the conclusion that East will be unable to fulfill a contract of one no trump. Your hand contains 11 points in high cards, and partner's hand is presumably worth at least 13. Your side, therefore, has at least 24 points to 16 for the adversaries. It is true that some of partner's points may be in distribution, in which case he need not stand for the double, but it is your duty to show the strength of your hand.

Q. 5—As South you hold:
♠A K 9 3 ♥A Q 6 4 2 ♠A 10 6 2
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 1 NT Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—Two spades. This is a close choice between a jump shift to three clubs and the reverse bid of two spades with our preference leaning toward the latter call. All the partner's no trump response over a diamond would make it appear likely that he fits one of the minors, he could conceivably have some four card spade holding not worth showing. We can always bid clubs subsequently should it prove expedient.

Q. 6—As South you hold:
♠8 4 ♥K 9 6 3 ♦K Q J 9 ♣K 6 5
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ 1 ♦ ?

What do you bid?
A.—Double. Your hand figures to produce about five tricks and your trump are good enough to make a game by the double, the compensation should prove more than adequate.

Q. 7—As South you hold:
♠10 6 5 ♥8 7 2 ♦J 10 9 3 2 ♣K 9
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
Pass Pass 1 ♦ Pass 2 ♠ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—Two no trump. Even the partner passed originally, his jump shift is forcing for one round. With the jack of spades promoted your hand is the equivalent of a sound opening bid. However, three no trump appears to be the most promising contract, as you want your hand led up to.

Q. 8—As South you hold:
♠10 6 ♥8 7 2 ♦J 10 9 3 2 ♣K 9
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass ?

What do you bid?
A.—No trump. This hand does not quite measure up to the requirements, but it does have a partial spade fit plus two tens. An effort should be extended to keep the bidding open and the alternative of an immediate spade raise would be too drastic.

Priests Prisoners

MIAMI (UPI) — Three Catholic priests—kept from the sacraments for 20 months—were among the 1,113 ransomed prisoners of the Cuban invasion. "They were not allowed to say Mass during their entire imprisonment and they were isolated from the other prisoners," said Father Muevo, of Valladolid, Spain. He identified the other priests as Fathers Mancho, Lugo and De Las Heras.

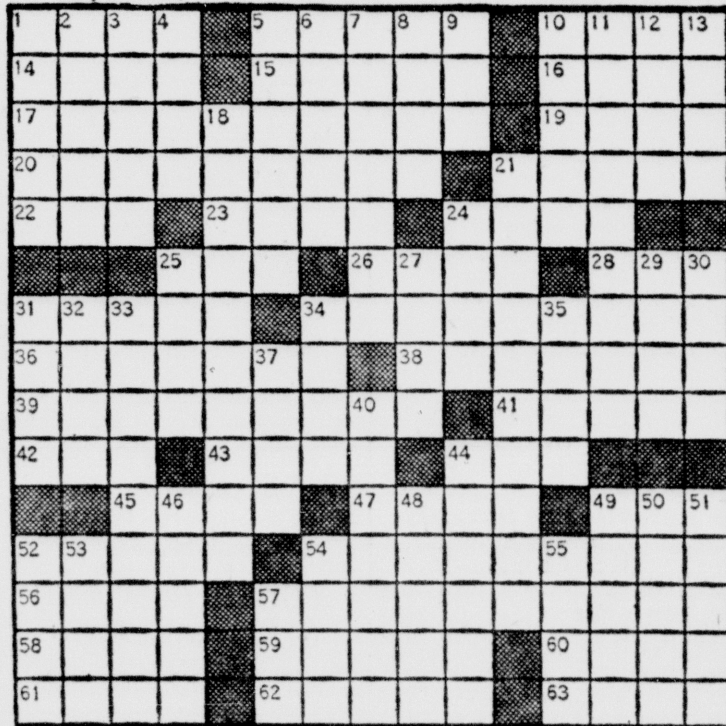

To get extra dividends from your mistletoe, spray it with clear plastic or dip the stem ends in melted wax. The Society of American Florists says this will keep the leaves from shriveling and the berries from falling at a most inopportune time.

FAA Keeps Trying To Make Air Travel Safer

Editor's Note: Each time there is an air disaster, the public wants to know again what is being done to make air travel safer. Here is a report on one phase of the situation.

ATLANTA (UPI) — Anyone looking toward the main jet runway of the Atlanta Municipal Airport might have wondered what kind of foolishness was being permitted.

A two-engine DC3 came out of low clouds to what seemed to be a normal landing. But at 200 feet the pilot gunned the engines, flashed along the entire 8,000-foot jet Runway No. 9 and roared back into the sky.

In the cockpit, pilot Harold Little was not indulging in tom foolery.

"FAA-2, you are cleared for a low level approach," said the voice from the control tower.

The plane circled and started down again.

"Give me the high intensity lights, please," Little said into his speaker.

Suddenly, a huge cross-shaped cluster of lights with a running series of strobe bulbs in the center flashed on at the end of the runway.

Little, a highly skilled Federal Aviation Agency inspector, was checking if the airport's instruments and safety equipment were functioning perfectly. A similar check not long ago showed that landing instruments were giving incorrect information. The runway was closed to aircraft arriving under severe weather conditions until the trouble was corrected.

Little is one of thousands of experts whose job it is to make flying safe as humanly possible.

When you're in an airliner in weather so thick you can't see the wing tips, a team of Federal Aviation Agency (FAA) controllers has your aircraft plainly in sight on about three radar screens. Your pilot is in contact with ground stations on up to 10 radio frequencies.

These controllers are the traffic cops for skyways that have become increasingly crowded with aircraft.

On a normal day, an average of 70,000 persons are in the air in one of the peak hours of travel. An estimated 55,000 aircraft are in flight in the nation at any given time of day. To keep this traffic sorted out requires not only rigid traffic rules but some intricate equipment.

"I remember when I went to work at the airport some years ago, we controlled incoming and departing airplanes by running out on the runway with a red flag," Richard Cosgrove, chief airport tower controller here, said.

Today Cosgrove's tower is part of an FAA Air Traffic Control network that covers the Southeast and interlocks with other FAA centers.

One of those regional centers is near Atlanta and is somewhat typical of the manner in which the air traffic cops work.

It is a bomb-proof structure with self-contained features for survival of personnel in event of nuclear war.

In a room the size of a small theater—air conditioned and sound proofed—a group of highly trained and dedicated men under the supervision of control center chief J.B. Smith work at telephones and over radar screens. They have under their control every aircraft in the skies in the southeastern United States—each one designated by figures and symbols written on small wooden blocks.

From the moment your plane takes off, it is visible as a "blip" on the screen of a radar set before which an FAA controller is sitting. Your pilot has been given precise flight instructions by the FAA.

As your airliner roars off, your flight is "handed off" by the local control tower to the FAA Air Traffic Control center. There are 17 of these in the country.

These regional control centers maintain radar surveillance of aircraft within a radius of 200 miles. One team of controllers is keeping tabs on all aircraft flying at altitudes of 24,000 feet and above. Others are watching planes at lower altitudes.

When your plane gets within about 30 miles of the Atlanta terminal, you are "handed off" to the Atlanta control tower. If it's between 11 a.m. and noon or from 5 to 6 p.m., Atlanta will be the busiest airport anywhere and you will have some sky waiting before you.

Your pilot will be given a "hold" position in what's called a "stack." While in the stack, your pilot will circle at a prescribed altitude (1,000 feet of altitude between planes) around a radio beacon. As one stack is filled, another is started. Sometimes there are as many as 8 or 10 of these stacks around the Atlanta terminal. Planes are peeled off the bottom as the busy tower brings ships down.

Suppose the weather is bad. That no-visibility might bother you, but it doesn't faze your pilot. As one put it, "When we near a busy airport, we pray for minimum ceiling and visibility because that clears out about half the air traffic."

More than 6 out of 10 air accidents occur at or within one-half mile of airports, so the safety precautions are intensified in the terminal areas.

Your plane is brought down through the clouds by instruments that double and triple check against each other. But in the final analysis, it is the captain of your craft who decides whether he should land.

At each end of instrument runways at airports like Atlanta, "the rabbit" runs in bad weather. This is the key part of the Instrument Landing System (ILS). These are the lights you can see on declining altitude stands at the ends of some runways.

When this system is operating, strobe lights with an intensity of three million candlepower for each bulb flash in series every two seconds. A pilot landing in foul weather sees the lights flashing with the appearance of bunnyhopping toward the center of the runway.

Pilots quickly dubbed the lights "the rabbit" and they swear by them as among the finest inventions in aviation.

If these lights can't be seen by the time the pilot is 200 feet from the ground, he is required to pass up a landing, resume altitude and get further instructions from the tower.

Evaporation of water from the skin of cattle through sweating is the most important way these animals dissipate heat from their bodies, according to scientists of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Freight Cars Derail Near Deer Park

Tracks Cleared At Meyersdale

The third derailment in as many days occurred on the B&O Railroad about 6:15 p.m. yesterday when two freight cars derailed near the old water station at Deer Park.

Ironically, this derailment was reported just 15 minutes before the main line was cleared at Meyersdale where 32 cars derailed on Saturday. Work crews were still working to clear the tracks at Connelville where the first derailment was reported Friday. Both main lines were blocked when 35 cars derailed.

A relief train was dispatched to Deer Park last night to clear track there.

All B&O trains are now running on normal routes and schedules, according to the Cumberland dispatcher's office.

Thirty-two cars of a westbound freight en route from Cumberland to Johnstown left the track Saturday as the train was descending a slight grade in Meyersdale.

One of the empty gondola cars careened from the tracks and into the frame house of Lewis Harding. Mr. Harding's mother was the only person in the house at the time and she was on the second floor. She collapsed and was taken to the home of a sister in Meyersdale.

The gondola crashed into the kitchen section of the home and extended into the center portion of the residence.

It was reported that the seventh car behind the three diesel locomotives hauling the freight broke away from the freight and the next 25 cars derailed and were scattered sideways in the cut adjacent to Broadway in Meyersdale.

The rest of cars in the freight did not derail. The diesel units and cars attached to them traveled about half a mile before the crew became aware of the accident, according to reports.

Work crews from Cumberland and Somerset were dispatched to the scene.

Work has continued since Friday in clearing the wreckage of 35 cars which derailed about nine miles west of Connelville.

No injuries were reported in any of the three derailments.

The three wrecks followed within eight days another derailment on the Pittsburgh Division near Hyndman when 19 cars left the tracks.

The Hyndman derailment last Saturday was blamed by railroad officials on shifting sheet steel in a gondola car. Damage to equipment was set at $16,000 in this wreck.

Fruit Growers Will Convene In Hagerstown

Maryland fruit growers will convene in their 63th winter meeting, to be held at Hotel Alexander, Hagerstown, January 3 and 4, under auspices of the State Horticulture Society.

The theme of the sessions will concern control of pests, and also, problems that come with changing conditions. Such items as control of orchard mice, apple scab, red mite and other fruit disease and insect pests; the problems in changing of fruit harvesting equipment; and also, late developments in peach culture will be considered.

The effects of the European Common Market on the Cumberland-Shenandoah fruit area will be reviewed, and there will be time for grower questions in all phases of fruit culture. Several educational movies will be included, involving pallet box construction, handling and storage; the mechanics of apple picking; also, glimpses of fruit growing techniques in the Northwest.

One of the features will be a special session for berry growers—at which varieties, disease-free stock, pest and weed control, and also, farm marketing of berries will be considered.

The program was planned by growers and it is expected that many orchardists from adjoining states will attend. The meetings are open to all growers.

Officers of the State Horticultural Society are: President, Raymond K. Gardenhour, Smithsburg, and Secretary, Albert F. Vierheller, College Park, who is retiring after 37 years in that office.

Hospital Wage Study To Start

BALTIMORE (AP)—A study of wages paid in Maryland hospitals, set to begin Jan. 1, may result in a savings in hospital costs.

Rudolf J. Pendall, the executive director of the Maryland Hospital Council, said Saturday the three-year study was likely to uncover confusion in the organization and wasteful use of personnel time.

"There is a definite possibility that it will result in the hiring of better hospital personnel, and in some instances, fewer of them," Pendall said.

The project may result in savings, but probably will not reverse the constant increase in hospital operations costs, he said.

The study will be financed by a $90,000 grant from the U.S. Public Health Service. It seeks to demonstrate the advantage to both patient and hospital of a state-wide consulting service in wage and salary administration.

The importance of sound personnel administration is shown by the fact that wages and salaries account for two-thirds of hospital costs, Pendall said.

State Roads Unit Creates Urban Traffic Division

BALTIMORE (AP)—The Maryland Roads Commission has created a new urban traffic division to work on transportation problems in the urban areas of the state.

Walter J. Addison, 36, was named to head the new division. He has been chief of the traffic engineering division in Baltimore County since 1957.

"The problem of providing for efficient movement in the great urban regions of Maryland, particularly in the Baltimore and Washington areas, becomes tougher every day as the population of these metropolitan centers increases," said John B. Funk, chairman-director of the commission.

Addison will study problems of both mass transportation systems and of the individual driver.

Church Carillon Dedication Set For January 20

The carillon which was installed in the tower of St. Luke's Lutheran Church, 1601 Frederick Street, last week will be dedicated January 20 at 4 p. m., according to Rev. Vernon I. Naugle, pastor.

Bruce Eicher, organist of Grace Methodist Church, Baltimore, will present the dedicatory recital in two parts. The first half of the recital will be held inside the church using the organ and carillon, the second half will be presented from the tower of the church.

The carillon provides the tonal equivalent of over 100,000 pounds of cast bells tuned to the finest standards. It will be played from the organ console. Selector switches will permit the bells to be heard within the building alone, solo with the organs, or from the tower.

The instrument includes an "auto-bell" roll player which allows automatic operation of the carillon by means of a calendar clock. Present plans are to play selections on the bells each day at noon and at 6 p. m.

The carillon is a gift to the church from John Hilderbrandt, Akron. Carillon bells consist of small bronze bell units which, when struck by metal hammers, produce pure bell tones, barely audible. The resultant minute vibrations are then amplified to any desired proportions and reproduced from the tower or roof of a building.

Hyman Pressman Suggests Plan For Blue Cross

BALTIMORE (AP)—Attorney Hyman Pressman, one of the leaders of opposition to a Blue Cross request for rate increase, has suggested that all subscribers to the plan be required to pay the first $25 of hospital cost plus $3 for each day.

Pressman said the mandatory deductible and daily charge proposal would deter abuses by subscribers who stay in the hospital longer than is necessary and enter the hospital unnecessarily.

Blue Cross now offers a $50 deductible policy at lower rates. However, Reginald H. Dabney, executive director of Blue Cross, said the plan is not popular because people want more and not less coverage.

The request by Blue Cross for a 22 per cent increase is being considered by F. Douglass Sears, Maryland Insurance commissioner.

County Obtains $3,215,877 From Tax Collections

$45,345 Added During November

Allegany County real estate and personal property collections in six months between June 1 and November 30 in the office of County Tax Collector William B. Orndorff totaled $3,215,877.61.

That total was reached with the addition of $45,345.86 collected in November, the sixth month since the bills were mailed early in June.

The aggregate is $112,527.61 more than the $3,103,350 anticipated by the conservative county commissioners for the entire fiscal year when they set the county tax levy back in April. The yield is 103.6 per cent of the commissioners' estimate for the whole year.

November collections included $25,548.92 from real estate, $19,786.94 from corporations and $10 for one trailer arrival tax.

Mr. Orndorff's office also collects taxes for four special taxing areas of the county. In November these figures were $309.06 for LaVale, $63.89 for Cresaptown, $8.76 for Potomac Park and $14.85 for Mt. Savage.

Some past due 1961 taxes also were collected last month. They included $5,226.55 in real estate taxes and $384.83 from corporations.

The tax collector said yesterday that the unpaid 1962 taxes are now being processed and the first week in January duplicate bills will be mailed to these delinquent taxpayers. These taxpayers will be assessed a 50-cent charge for these duplicate bills in addition to the two per cent interest required in January. This month the rate is one and one-half per cent. Taxpayers making partial payments in December can avoid the duplicate bills and the 50 cent charge.

Six-month collections this year are running $220,099.85 behind the same period of 1961 when the county tax rate was $2.10 on each $100 of assessed valuation. This year the rate was dropped to $1.85 so that a smaller tax yield is logical.

Monthly collections since June, with the 1961 figure listed first in each case:

June—$2,966,246.29 and $2,803,442.42; July—$139,699.05 and $118,915.56; August—$131,443.55 and $125,394.86; September—$83,488.30 and $69,660.81; October—$63,749.48 and $52,718.10; and November—$51,380.79 and $45,345.86.

Bowhunters Denounce Deer Killer

Club Offers Help In Solving Crime

The Cumberland Bowhunters yesterday denounced the "irresponsible slaughter" of Jasper, the city's pet deer who was killed last weekend, apparently by an arrow.

"We felt compelled to make public our own feelings on this feeble-minded act, lest there be any blame attached to bowhunters in general through association with the weapon used," the club said.

Jasper, who was 14 years old, lived in a pen at Constitution Park. Part of a hunting arrow was found there last weekend, and Jasper's body apparently had been dragged to a waiting car or truck.

The Cumberland Bowhunters said that although their members are but a small number of all those who hunt with bow and arrow, "an act of this kind is completely alien to the makeup of the average bowhunter."

The club said most people who have taken up bow hunting have done so because they like archery and because they find a greater challenge in this type of hunting.

Members of the club said the killing of a caged animal would make no sense to any sportsman, and that a deer Jasper's age hardly could have provided prime venison anyway.

"Although it will be of little consolation to the hundreds of adults and children who enjoyed the deer for so many years, the criminal—if he is discovered—will not only be prosecuted, but he will be finished in organized archery."

The club offered its services in the investigation of the crime. Its statement was signed by 18 officers and members of the club.

County Board Rejects Bids For Ambulance

Bids submitted by Gratton Ford Inc. and Frostburg Auto Company for the furnishing of a station wagon — ambulance conversion—were rejected Friday by the County Commissioners, who said the bids did not meet specifications.

Charles E. Robinson of Robinson Plumbing and Heating Company, submitted a price of $315 for two closets and lavatories in the men's rest room on the third floor of the Court House and $157 for a closet and lavatory in the ladies' rest room on the same floor.

The work was recommended by previous grand juries, and the commissioners unanimously voted to authorize James G. Stevenson, clerk, to have the work done.

Upon recommendation of Harry T. Skelly, supervisor of county roads, Aloysius E. Fair, Delbert T. Puffinberger and Robert G. Hershberger, on probation in the roads department since July, were placed on permanent status.

Marshal Logsdon of Mt. Savage applied for appointment as constable in the Mt. Savage district.

Salvation Army Kettle Yield Exceeds $4,100

Over $1,300 Needed To Reach Goal Today

Today is Christmas Eve and the final day of operation of the Salvation Army's Christmas Cheer kettle on Baltimore Street, where more than $1,300 is still needed to reach the $5,500 goal established before the kettle was opened.

Major Ben Jones, commander officer of the Salvation Army here, said last night that Saturday's collection of $668.48 by the Cumberland Rotary Club was the highest one-day yield yet. That brought the total collections to $4,114.85.

Major Jones had anticipated a large collection Friday when the Cumberland Lions Club manned the kettle but the heavy snowfall that day kept many shoppers away from downtown. The Lions collected $284.78, which was less than the $323.34 received by the Cumberland Kiwanis Club on Thursday.

Today Lewis J. Ort, a life member of the Salvation Army Advisory Board, will follow his Christmas Eve custom of manning the kettle along with Major Jones.

Some 250 food baskets will be distributed to communities all over the Tri-State area by the Salvation Army today, according to Major Jones. They will go to Grantsville, Friendsville, Mt. Savage, Jennings, Ellerslie, Lonaconing, Midland, and Barton in Maryland as well as to the West Virginia communities of Burlington, Ridgeley, Wiley Ford, Elk Garden and Keyser.

Toys also will be distributed to many less-fortunate families of the area by the Salvation Army.

The Christmas message, invocation, and benediction will be given by Rev. Clarence McCloud, pastor of Midland Methodist Church.

"O Holy Night" and "Gesu Bambino" will be sung by Miss Patricia Linaburg, accompanied by Mrs. Grace Lucas.

The welcoming address will be presented by Joseph Davis, commander. John T. Reid, captain general, will read General Order No. 1 from William E. King, right eminent grand commander of the Grand Commandery of Knights Templar of Maryland, ordering all constituent commanderies to assemble on Christmas Day and pay homage to the birth of Christ.

A toast will be given by Mr. Davis, commander, to Paul Miller Moore, most eminent grand master of the Grand Encampment of Knights Templar of the United States with the response by Carlton H. Lapp Sr., generalissimo.
